TWO MORE BODIES ARE EXHUMED

A sensation was sprung in the mysterious wholesale poison case of which Mrs. Mary Kelleher, indicted for the murder of four members of her family, is the centre, when to-day the bodies of two others of her relatives were exhumed secretly in St. Paul's Cemetery at Arlington.

The bodies are those of Stephen Kelleher, the husband of the indicted woman, and Bridget Knowles, her sister. Both of them died under circumstances that have led the police to believe that they may have been the victims of poison.

Six Bodies Exhumed.

This makes six bodies that have been disinterred in connection with the puzzling poison mystery. The other bodies included the three children of Mr. Kelleher. They were:

MARY, three years of age. Died November 13, 1906.

WILLIAM, nine years of age. Died June 16, 1908.

CATHERINE, twelve years of age. Died July 23, 1908.

MISS ANNIE T. KELLEHER, sister-in-law, who died March 1, 1906.

The bodies of Mrs. Kelleher's husband and sister were taken from their graves by order of District Attorney Higgins, under whose direction detectives have been working for many months. At the graves when the work began about 7 o'clock to-day were Chief of Police Charles A. Kendall of Somerville and Lieutenant Carter. The policemen had taken great care that the work should be done without it becoming public.

When the bodies had been disinterred they were placed in a wagon and taken to the undertaking establishment of J. Henry Hartwell of Arlington. Medical Examiners William D. Swan and Thomas M. Durrell were notified and arranged to remove the viscera of the bodies, to be sent to

15 EXCURSIONISTS STRUCK BY TRAIN

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 3.—Fifteen young persons were injured by being run down by a freight train near Williamsburg, near here. They had started in a four-horse hay wagon for Flowing Springs, where there was to be a corn roast in the grove. When they reached the grade crossing over the Petersburg cut-off of the Pennsylvania railroad a freight train came suddenly off a siding and crashed into the wagon.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Washington, Sept. 3.—The Athletics and Washingtons lined up for a game this afternoon, both teams having just returned from the West. The Mackmen are now relying on their ability to win 80 per cent. of their remaining games, and they figure a record like this will come near winning them the pennant.

The Tigers cannot be expected to keep up their phenomenal streak of wins and the Philadelphians look for a decided slump as soon as the Tigers strike the East.

"We will keep right after everything in sight, trusting that the luck will break badly for Jennings's men," said Manager Connie Mack to-day. "I had hoped that the Red Sox would pull the Tigers down, but they did not do so. We will have to start all over again, that's all."

FOURTEEN FINED FOR OVERSPEEDING

Fourteen were fined to-day for speeding by Judge Grover in the Dedham District Court, the arrests being made in Wellesley. Those fined were L. E. Beach, West Springfield; Mathias Matteson, Natick; Dr. Townsend W. Thorndike and Fred S. Douglas, Boston; Morrill M. Galber, Fitchburg; George T. Lincoln, Newton; Arthur N. Burgess, Bridgewater; Frank Hanson, C. Samuel Allen and Fred C. Graves, Boston; Harvey Hardy, Newton, were fined $15; Francis C. Minot, Waltham, motorcycle; Walter L. Raymond, motorcycle, Weymouth, $10. The case of W. H. Simpson of Malden was continued.

ELLEN IN HOT RACE; SONDERS NEAR FINISH

MARBLEHEAD, Sept. 3.—Under the eyes of President Taft, who followed them on the government yacht Sylph, the three American sonder boats made an excellent showing soon after the start of the fourth race of the series to-day with their German opponents for the Taft and Draper cups.

President Taft followed the racers closely. On the bridge of the Sylph with him sat Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Laughlin of Pittsburg; Secretary of State Knox and Captain A. W. Butt. Luncheon was served to the party on deck. Secretary of the Navy Meyer and a party of ladies watched the battle from the naval dispatch boat Dolphin.

When the racers started on the last round the Ellen was still ahead, followed by the Joyette, Wolf, Hevella, Margarethe and Seehund. This order was maintained practically during the second beat to the mark, and on the run home the fleet German boat, Hevella gave a surprise to the rest of the fleet by shooting ahead and fighting the Ellen for the lead. As the boats raced home, presenting a beautiful sight, it looked as though to-day's contest was between the Ellen and the Hevella, with the odds slightly in favor of the American boat.

The Ellen and Joyette, both of which have one race to their credit, were especially speedy, leading the other competitors for a good part of the way.

When the six boats reached the first mark the three Americans had gradually forged well ahead of the trio of competitors from across the water. They turned the first mark about noon, with the Ellen in the lead, and the Joyette a close second. The Wolf, another American sonder, was third.

The three German boats ran in this order: Hevella, the winner of yesterday's race, first; Margarethe, second, and Seehund II., third. The breeze died down somewhat and it was regarded as ideal weather for the fleet Yankees.

Seehund Fights Hard.

The hot contest between the three American boats for the Draper trophy was shown in the run home after the turn of the first mark. Captain Swan made a desperate effort to overtake the Ellen and for a time the two little boats ran almost evenly. They were about in this position when the first round was completed.

The Seehund was making every endeavor, because all the boats which have not won a race drop out after to-day's contest. The Wolf, Margarethe and Seehund were each trying to finish first to-day so that they will have a show in the final race.

Greeting to Taft.

The course was three miles to windward, a run back and a repetition, making twelve miles in all for to-day's race.

The American boat Wolf gained some advantage at the start. While the five other boats started on a starboard beat, the Wolf elected to tack and in a few moments it was evident that Captain Caleb Loring of the Wolf had used good judgment, for he gained several seconds on the other boats.

The course lay down the coast more than five miles from shore and it was pretty difficult from those who crowded the Marblehead rocks to follow the little racers with their glasses.

The fact that the President was on the ground and that to-day's contest would decide the winner of the Draper cup added to the enthusiasm of the occasion.

The Sylph, which brought the President from Beverly, reached the race course before the starting gun was fired. Her appearance evoked intense enthusiasm among the yachtsmen and the spectators on all sorts of craft in the vicinity.

As the Sylph came into close proximity to the little racers the American and German flags on them were dipped almost simultaneously in salute, and the cheers of the spectators mingled with blasts from the steam whistles on the larger boats and the shrill sirens of the motor craft.

The President, clad in blue serge and white flannel, was on the forward deck of the Sylph, and waved his hand and tipped his cap as he acknowledged individual salutes as the Sylph ran along.

COOK ARRIVES OFF DANISH COAST

Explorer Due in Copenhagen Early To-morrow and Royal Reception Is Planned for Him---Discovery Is Generally Credited.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 3.—The steamship Hans Egede, with Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the American explorer who found the North Pole, on board, passed Cape Skagen, the northern extremity of Denmark, at 2 p. m.

The distance by sea from Cape Skagen to Copenhagen is about one hundred and forty nautical miles. The steamship Hans Egede is a small vessel of low speed perhaps ten or twelve knots. It will, therefore be about twelve or fourteen hours from 2 p. m. before the vessel arrives at Copenhagen, that is, she will get in early to-morrow morning.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 3.—This city is the capital of the world to-day, for all await the coming of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the American discoverer of the North Pole, who will arrive here to-night upon the steamer Hans Egede, convoyed into the harbor by a flotilla of Danish torpedo boats whose guns will thunder a world salute to the intrepid explorer whose name will go through the balance of time attached to the 30,000 square miles of American territory surrounding the Pole.

Homage greater than that tendered a potentate will be paid Dr. Cook. Kings will do honor to the modest American who has blazed the trail for others to follow and set the emblem of America upon land never before sighted by human eyes.

The Hans Egede, under full steam, is trying to break all records between Lerwik and Copenhagen. The torpedo boat Jutland, steaming under orders from the Minister of Marine, was dispatched last night from Aashus to meet the incoming vessel, and a flotilla set out from the harbor to-day to convoy the steamer in.

Dr. Cook will be the guest of the Geographical Society while in this city. They equipped a steamer to-day, and she went forth resplendent with flags to greet the discoverer. The Minister of Commerce took charge of affairs, and preparations for a royal series of entertainments have been set on foot. The banquet in his honor will be a notable event.

King Frederick to Greet Cook.

Tourists, scientists and others interested in Dr. Cook's marvellous feat poured into Copenhagen to-day. All the newspapers print commendatory articles and call upon the people of Denmark to unite in welcoming the American. King Frederick will personally receive Dr. Cook and extend the hospitality of his nation.

There has never been the slightest doubt among Danish scientists of the truth of Cook's narrative. Commodore Hovgaard to-day declared:

"I believe Dr. Cook's story is true because he is entirely trustworthy and opposed to all exaggeration."

C. A. Nielson of the Greenland Administration Department said: "When Dr. Cook said he discovered the Pole there can be no doubt of it."

Dr. Morlee F. Hagen, the American Minister, boarded the steamer fitted out by the geographical society before she steamed from the harbor to-day. Rooms have already been prepared for Dr. Cook at the Hotel Phoenix.

The Jutland was expected to meet the Hans Egede off Skaw.

SAVES 2 SONS AT QUINCY FIRE

The flight of twenty terror stricken tenants in their night clothing and the rescue of two little boys by their father, after a dash through flames and smoke, were the features of a fire that partly destroyed the two-story apartment house at No. 139 Arlington street, Quincy. More than a score of lives were imperilled.

Frank Colpitt, who had fled to the street, discovered that his two sons were missing. He raced back through smoke filled hallways to the room where the little fellows slept and found them huddled together so terrified they were unable to help themselves. The bed clothing was in flames and the youngsters were nearly choked by smoke. Colpitt tore away the flaming bed covers and clasping the boys in his arms carried them to the street.

Twenty other people who were sleeping in the building when the fire was discovered in the rear of the second story, fled without taking time to save clothing or valuables. They found refuge in nearby houses. The damage to the building will reach $1,200. The cause of the fire is unknown.

$10,000 SAVED BY CITY IN AUGUST

There was a saving of $30,481 in the city payrolls for August of the current year over the corresponding month last year, according to the monthly report of City Treasurer Slattery made public to-day. The actual reduction, however, will be approximately about $10,000 since one of the August drafts was figured in the July payrolls. The figures for August, 1908, were $853,817, and for 1909, $823,335. From January to August the payroll payments were $7,952,455. This is a saving of $281,855 over the corresponding period of 1908.

3-DAY RECORD FOR LUSITANIA

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—More records are to be sought by the steamship Lusitania of the Cunard line, the first four-day ship to cross the Atlantic ocean on the westward course. It is hoped that in time she will become the "three-day boat."

When she leaves this port for Europe next Wednesday an attempt will be made to reduce the running time again. Captain Turner and the officers and force in the engine room believe they can easily do it. They declared that only for some bad weather they would have arrived here two hours earlier than they did Thursday and thus have broken the records by just so much more time. As it was she clipped 2 hours and 58 minutes off the record, covering the course in four days, 11 hours and 42 minutes.

INCOME TAX ECHO IN STATEHOOD WAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Residents of New Mexico and Arizona intend making a great effort at the next session of Congress to obtain the passage of a bill which will give the territories statehood. The opponents of the plan say that if New Mexico and Arizona are admitted to statehood it will require thirteen States instead of twelve to defeat the income tax amendment to the Constitution. It is likely that both Arizona and NeM wexico would be in favor of the income tax.

PLAN TRIPLE HOLIDAY.

By general agreement, the principal upper leather and finders concerns in the Boston leather district will close their places of business all day to-morrow, thus giving their employes a triple holiday.

KILLED BY MACHINE.

FITCHBURG, Sept. 3.—Climbing across a paper machine to repair it, John Berg, a machinist in the mills of the Crocker, Burbank Company, West Fitchburg, slipped and fell. His skull was crushed and he died instantly.

GREAT HORSES IN MATCH FOR WORLD RECORD

READVILLE RACE TRACK, Sept. 3.—Half an hour's earlier start was made this afternoon in the windup of the Grand Circuit meeting in order to finish in seasonable time the star card offered. The match race between Hamburg Belle and Uhlan for the trotting championship of the world was the stellar feature that brought out the biggest crowd of the entire week.

The weather conditions were perfect, and the track had dried out enough to be called ordinarily fast, but it never got to feather edge, for even the big race, though that was put off till the final event to give the sun and breezes every chance to improve it.

Can the local trotter Uhlan defeat Hamburg Belle in this, the second meeting of the two this season? All over Boston this was the ripe argument last night in places where lovers of the horse were congregated.

In the first battle of the two at Cleveland the mare carried off the honors, but not till she was compelled to earn the world's race record for a single heat of 2:01¼, and then made it good for two heats by nailing the second one in 2:01¾. Never before that day had a trotter raced in better than 2:03¼.

It came as a big surprise to the Boston fans, as the idea here was that in Uhlan was the greatest piece of horseflesh ever having worn a harness. The excuse after the beating has been that the gelded son of Bingen had not been keyed to race in such fast time, but the race on the other hand should have legged him up to giving his opponent a trimming at the next meeting, which means the one coming off this afternoon.

Hamburg Belle Picked to Win.

Betting on the result is 5 to 3 on Hamburg Belle, and she will likely go to the post about the same odds. Asking the price of a well-known bookie last night, at one of the hotels, a New Yorker at once dug into his pocket, remarking, "I may be Mutt after a drunk, but I'm silly enough right now to put up $60 against $100 on Uhlan at the odds."

Leaving the match outside of the discussion for a period, it might be well for the talent to remember that there is the American Horse Breeders' Futurity on the programme. In this event, now already a classic with such performers on its list of past winners as General Watts, the most wonderful three-year-old the entire world ever saw; Ed Custer, the youthful trotting hero of the middle West in his day, and The Leading Lady, the champion filly of her age and bred right here in Boston.

Have Confidence in Soprano.

With the track in anywhere near fine shape it is safe that 2:10 will be beaten by the colt that wins to-day. Nancy McKerron goes to the tape with the best record of any 2:10¼, but the friends of Soprano have confidence the former can be beaten by their representative and are itching for the opportunity.

Then, too, there will take the word Bertha C., a winner right along this year and from the farm that produced Ed. Custer; The Wolverine, who last year when two earned a record of 2:13¾, the best mark to the credit of a colt his age in a race; Gaworthy, from the string of James Brady, the former Boston trainer with a career of being the colt trainer of the country and says the filly is the fastest he ever drove at the same age, and to complete the measure comes both James A., and O'Neil with clean, enticing dope back of them.

$10,000,000 PROPERTY IN BOSTON ESCAPED TAX TILL THIS YEAR

The revelation that more than $10,000,000 in personal property in Boston has escaped taxation until this year has caused a sensation among taxpayers which has been augmented by the fact that among the men who have hitherto eluded the eyes of the assessors are some of the most prominent residents of Boston. The larger part of the discovered personal property—$6,334,900—lies in Ward 11, which comprises the Back Bay section.

Here is a list of some of the most prominent property owners who will pay more taxes this year:

Boston Personal Property Trust	$1,662,000
Copley Square Trust	1,500,000
Laurence Minot	541,900
Augustus P. Loring	253,600
Francis Welch	186,000
Moses Williams	178,000
Charles E. Cotting	171,000
Robert S. Minot	72,900
George U. Crocker	28,600
Charles P. Curtis	20,000
Total	$4,614,000

How It Came Out.

Taxpayers who have been contributing all that they owed the city in years past are wondering how these concerns and men escaped in the past. Laurence Minot, the head of the Good Government Association, in his explanation of how the assessors got at him simply said that they questioned him more closely this year than they did in the past and in that way they got more out of him.

All of which seems to indicate that it is up to the assessors to do some very close cross-questioning in their work.

Last year the personal valuation in Ward 11 was $74,449,700. This year it is more than $80,000,000. Most of it has escaped all tax assessments in previous years. It is said that the city assessors appreciate the assistance of the State supervisors of assessors. The latter unearthed most of the property that escaped the vigilant eyes of the city taxers.

There is one instance, however, in which the city assessors really uncovered some untaxed property. This was in the case of the Boston Personal Property Trust, untaxed in previous years and assessed for over a million this year.

Double Trust's Valuation.

The assessors not only discovered that trust but even doubled the trust's own valuation of $831,000 upon which it expressed a willingness to be taxed. The trust has objected to the action of the assessors and it is said there is probability of a court contest before the city gets the tax.

Here are the trustees of the Boston Personal Trust: Robert S. Minot, Moses Williams, Arthur Lyman, Charles F. Adams, 2d, Henry B. Cabot. Mr. Lyman is a new trustee, succeeding A. Lawrence Lowell, the new head of Harvard University.

Of these trustees Moses Williams this year gets a tax bill that shows assessments on $178,000 newly discovered personal property. Robert S. Minot finds he is taxed for $72,900 more than in former years.

Mr. Williams's increase is exclusive of his share in the Copley Square Trust, which is taxed for $1,500,000 and which escaped taxation from 1902 until this year because its deed to the old Art Museum was not filed.

Some Other Increases.

Other notable increases include one of $186,000 for Francis Welch, $253,600 for Augustus P. Loring, $72,900 for Robert S. Minot, $28,600 for George U. Crocker, a member of the old Finance Commission; $20,000 for Charles P. Curtis, a member of the new Finance Commission, and $171,800 for Charles E. Cotting. This is on trust property.

In the assessment on personal property valued at $609,900 held by Laurence Minot there is one item for $46,000 for property held in trust for Finance Commissioner Francis N. Balch. Mr. Balch pays a poll tax.

COURT BACKS UP WILLIAMS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Twice in the last three years most of the Boston newspapers have published decrees of the Rhode Island Courts declaring me to be "unfaithful" in the administration of the Starkweather estate for refusing to satisfy a decree made against me by a Court of Equity. It was not explained that the term "unfaithful administration" was a mere statutory expression for an alleged breach of my executor's bond, and that this finding was necessary in order that my liability might be properly tested by a suit on the bond.

On my return from London I find that none of the Boston newspapers have published the fact that this Summer the highest court in Rhode Island, in a twenty-four-page decision, has justified my refusal to satisfy the decree and given a final verdict in my favor.

While I do not believe that the early reports created a belief either in friend or enemy that I would in any way mishandle an estate, I ask you to publish this letter that my final justification by the Supreme Court may be known to those who recall the earlier newspaper reports.

GEORGE FRED WILLIAMS.

TRY TO RAISE YANKEE TO-DAY

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 3.—After months of preparation an attempt will be made to-day to raise the United States cruiser Yankee off Nonquitt, where she foundered in forty-two fathoms of water last December. The eyes of the naval and maritime world are centred on the attempt.

Compressed air will be used to raise the cruiser. To-day's test will be taken to determine the worth of this power for raising sunken vessels.

Commander Charles C. G. Morse of the Yankee and several other naval officers came to New Bedford early to-day in response to telegrams from the Arbuckle Wrecking Company, which has the salvage work in charge. They left early for the Yankee, an hour and a half sail down the bay.

The plans for to-day's raising test have been kept secret. A fleet of lighters surrounds the Yankee. The cruiser's masts and one funnel can be seen above water. If she is raised she will be towed to this port, where temporary repairs will be made. Later she will go to either the Brooklyn or the Charlestown Navy Yard for complete overhauling.

BREAK RECORD IN TRIALS OF LOWELL AUTOS

By J. C. KERRISON.

LOWELL, Sept. 3.—The darkness of night had hardly been driven away by the dawn before the great majority of the race drivers in camp along the Merrimac course were at work on their motors, preparing for what turned out to be the liveliest practice day of the week. Miles was ridden in phenomenally fast time, and it was evident that all course records will be lowered during the contests.

There were two narrow escapes from serious injury. The hundreds gathered at the spot on Varnum avenue where Otis met his death, and likewise at the turn from Varnum into Dunbar avenue received "thrillers" that brought visions of the dangers of motor racing.

Three cars came down the hill near the Chalmers camp shortly after 5 o'clock, travelling at a fast clip. The foremost car was a Chalmers-Detroit, driven by Gaitnaur. As he reached the corner, some fifty yards or more ahead of the other two cars, he turned towards the right, intending to take the street leading to his camp, and naturally imagined, those ahead would go by him on the left hand side. One of the cars did. The second car, a Knox, driven by Belcher, tried to pass him on the right, and in going around struck the Chalmers.

The rear wheel of the Knox hit the right front wheel of the Chalmers a glancing but still a powerful blow, causing the left front wheel to go down and throwing Gaitnaur and his mechanic to the ground. Belcher came to a stop as soon as possible and the two men matched notes.

Personal injuries were the first noted. It was found that not one of the four men had received a scratch. The Chalmers was towed to the training quarters and the Knox went to its quarters under its own power. Both cars will need the attention of an expert.

Records Are Smashed.

Almost at the same time, on the turn from Varnum into Dunbar avenue, there was another accident. Seickinger, in the little Maxwell, tried to make the acute right angle turn at top speed. His car dashed on the grass plot and turned over, throwing the two men out. Neither was injured.

There were twenty-five cars out for practice work, and the course record was shattered. Al Poole made the best time of the day, covering the course in 10m. 28s., at an average of about 59 miles an hour. Close behind him was George Robertson in the Simplex, who reeled off something like 40 miles at 50 miles an hour. Harry Grant in the Alco was there with the speed for two full laps, and at that he did not display his best foot.

Bert Dingley and Lorimer of the Chalmers camp were not very far behind in the record work, while Herb Lyttle in the powerful and noisy Jackrabbit was going at his usual 85 miles an hour down the homestretch. Chevrolet, the winner of the Crown Point contest, drove five laps, but never let her out. His teammate, Burman, made the third best time over the course, 10:5.

RICH MAN DROWNS IN SIGHT OF FRIENDS

SALISBURY BEACH, Sept. 3.—While his wife and friends were sitting on the piazza of Clinton Hall here to-day unable to render any assistance, William McIvers, thirty, a well-to-do resident of Lawrence, was carried off his feet while bathing in the surf and drowned before the life-saving crew could reach him. McIvers went into the surf for a swim and was caught in the undertow. He made one outcry, but his wife and friends thought he was joking, so no one ran to assist him.

600 MORE HIRED TO BREAK STRIKE

Emissaries of the tin mills in Newcastle are busy among the new men brought to the car works offering higher wages and better conditions to break the strike in the tin mills.

TAMPA ON MAP YET; PROPHETS DISGUSTED

TAMPA, Fla., Sept. 3.—Disappointed because their prophecy that Tampa was to be wiped off the map by a great disaster September 1 failed to come true, thirty footsore and weary disciples of the "Unknown Tongue" returned to this city to-day from Durant, twenty-five miles from here. Several days ago the party sold their all here and moved to Durant, which they were told would be outside the stricken zone. Their chief priestess, however, is said to have raised the price of provisions to the "faithful," the profits going to herself. The prophecy now has been revised to read September 18.

SEEK STRANGE PAIR IN QUEST FOR LOST GIRL

The police were asked to-day to look for Miss Winifred Grealish, a beautiful girl of eighteen, who has been mysteriously missing since she landed from the Saxonia at this port yesterday morning on her way to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Julia Small, No. 18 Avon place, Newton.

The girl was last seen in the company of an elderly man and woman, with whom she had apparently got acquainted on board the ship. As she is well educated and had $50 in money, her friends are at a loss as to why she has not made her way to the Newton address.

In a letter to her aunt the girl, who had just graduated from Prospect Hill Convent, County Galway, wrote:

"I would be delighted if you would receive me, and I hope that when I land you will be able to procure for me a nice situation. I have sufficient money to pay my passage and to provide for me until I get a place. I hope you will not refuse me. I shall be very grateful for all that you do for me, and may God reward you."

Misses Girl at Ship.

The girl's aunt is in Maine, but she made arrangements with Mrs. John McCarthy of the same address to meet her niece at the dock and take care of her. When Mrs. McCarthy was seen to-day she said:

"I telephoned to the Cunard people to detain Miss Grealish on the Saxonia until I arrived there, and they promised to do what they could in the matter. I thought that everything was all right and I went to the dock perfectly secure in the belief that she would be there awaiting me.

"I had not seen the girl since she was two years of age and did not expect to know her. I was told that she was very pretty and that she had blonde hair. I was greatly surprised whe uthe emigration officials told me that she had been landed and they showed me that a Mrs. Manian had signed the entrance blank as sponsor.

With Strange Couple.

"I telephoned to the Manian home and then went there personally, but Mrs. Manian could not help me much. She thought that Miss Grealish had gone to the home of her aunt. She said that when she last saw her she was on the pier with a man of middle age and a woman."

Mrs. Manian lives at No. 38 Cottage street, Wellesley. She told Mrs. McCarthy that she went to the Saxonia to meet her daughter whom she expected and who it turned out had attended the same school as Miss Grealish.

SICK TWO YEARS AFTER THE GRIP

Tonic Treatment Is Necessary After the Acute Stage of the Disease Is Past Before the Health Can Be Fully Restored.

A single attack of the grip may mean a lifetime of misery if proper precautions are not taken to restore the blood and drive out the lingering poisons that cause the so called "after-effects" of the disease.

The danger from the grip is seldom over when the characteristic symptoms, the fever, the catarrh, the headache and the depression of spirits pass away. The grip leaves behind it weakened vital powers, thin blood, impaired digestion and over-sensitive nerves—a condition that makes the system an easy prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, rheumatism, nervous prostration, and even consumption. Too much stress cannot be laid on the importance of strengthening the blood and nerves during convalescence.

Mrs. W. H. Parker, of No. 96 West Union street, Newark, N. Y., tells of her cure by this treatment, as follows:

"I was sick for two years following an attack of the grip and could get little relief from the doctors' treatment. I had a bad cough for over a year and everyone thought I was going into consumption. I was extremely nervous and had trembling spells which affected me so that I couldn't sit still. During this year I had to lie down most of the time.

My heart palpitated and my head ached frequently. I lost a great deal in weight, had no ambition and was not able to do much work. I had no appetite at all and my stomach was weak.

"I was led to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by reading of a cure of a case similar to mine and felt some benefit in a short time. The trembling spells left me and I picked up right along until I was cured."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have also cured such blood diseases as anæmia, rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fevers. Owing to the intimate relation between the blood and nerves, the pills have been found invaluable in such nervous diseases as dizziness, nervous debility, neuralgia and St. Vitus' dance.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

WOMAN WHITE SLAVE CADET SUSPECT HELD UNDER $3,000 BONDS

Alma Winchester, beautiful girl rescued from white slavery. Sketched in court by American artist.

The white slave traffic in Boston, which Commissioner O'Meara declines to suppress, received a body blow from Judge Wentworth in the Municipal Court yesterday afternoon when he held Mrs. Laude Despres in the heavy bail of $3,000 for the Grand Jury. She is charged with having induced Miss Alma Winchester, a beautiful Montreal girl of nineteen, to come to Boston.

The girl herself and Thomas Lockhouse, who claims he rescued her from the clutches of the Depres woman and took her from No. 2 Billerica street, where she is alleged to have been detained against her will, were held for the Grand Jury in $800 bail each.

Miss Winchester told the Court that she had been honestly employed as a milliner in her home city and happened to meet Mrs. Despres. The Boston woman told her a story of immense wages to be had here and she believed her. When she reached the woman's house in Billerica street her clothes were taken from her, she says, and she was subjected to ill treatment. Then Lockhouse came along and "rescued" her, she said.

FALL OPENING AT THE GATELY STORE

The sudden drop in temperature is having a beneficial effect on retail trade, especially in those lines which cater to the fashions. The clothing dealers report numerous inquiries for advance Fall styles. Some of the more enterprising merchants are already prepared with new stock for the Autumn trade. Among those announcing Fall openings is Gately's, at No. 874 Washington street. Their display of Fall clothing for men and women is now ready for inspection. Union-made garments, latest designs and best of material combine to attract patronage. Particular attention is called to the new, two-piece suits for women and misses in smart, tailor-made effects. The new French serges, novelty cloths, worsteds and Panamas seem to have the preference.

FREEMAN, ROLLINS & CO. SUSPEND

The suspension was announced on State street to-day of the stock brokerage house of Freeman, Rollins & Company of Boston and New York. Liabilities are said to be $200,000.

The failure is believed to be an outcome of the failure last May of Sederquist, Barry & Company of this city, who went to the wall for half a million, and whose affairs have been subject of a sensational investigation.

The creditors' committee of Sederquist, Barry & Company, in a recent report said that that house owed Freeman, Rollins & Company about $100,000. The committee said flatly that the relations between the two houses should be rigidly investigated.

The committee even hinted that the time was ripe for showing just who was liable for the Sederquist Barry crash.

The frequent mention of the name of Freeman, Rollins & Company by the Sederquist Barry committee makes the failure now of Freeman, Rollins & Company the more striking.

The headquarters of Freeman, Rollins & Company are at No. 25 Broad street, New York. The Boston branch offices are at No. 50 Congress street. The firm consists of Perley L. Freeman, Josepa F. Freeman and Charles H. Rollins. Mr. Freeman was the New York Stock Exchange member. He was admitted January 23, last.

The firm was successor to Curtis, Freeman & Company, which dissolved last January on the retirement of Harry F. Curtis. Mr. Curtis was formerly partner in the firm of Curtis, Sederquist & Company, which became Sederquist, Barry & Company when Mr. Curtis left it.

At the Boston offices of Freeman, Rollins & Company the following statement from the New York headquarters was given out after the suspension.

> The firm of Freeman, Rollins & Company have this day notified the New York Stock Exchange of their inability to meet their engagements to-day, and have therefore been forced to suspend business for the time being.
> We are informed that the affairs of the firm are in such condition as to warrant a belief that business can be resumed in a short time. A brief statement of the affairs of the firm is being mailed to-day to the firm's customers and creditors.

> No. 22 Williams street, New York.

> We understand that the capital of the firm is not greatly impaired, and that the suspension is temporary.
> The statement referred to in the statement by the New York counsel for the firm will be given out as soon as it is received.
> FREEMAN, ROLLINS & COMPANY.

M. Otto Goldsmith, the senior member of the law firm, when seen at his office in New York, added this to the official statement:

"The failure was due to heavy withdrawals by customers and inability to collect debts. The firm was not short of United States Steel or of anything else. There is nothing spectacular or sensational in this failure. Nor will the amount of the liabilities be large. The firm, as we have said, will be able to resume without any doubt."

MRS. JESSIE FORBES, NAMED IN $75,000 ALIENATION SUIT

TRAIN IS WRECKED ON BANK OF RIVER

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 3.—Mrs. R. M. Rollins and Mrs. Edward Lawless were probably fatally hurt and eleven other passengers were severely injured when a loaded Rock Island passenger train, carrying State Fair visitors, struck a packed Fort Des Moines street car in the middle and crushed it to kindling wood.

The street car was dragged fifty feet on the pilot and wrecked against the steel girders of the railroad bridge across the Des Moines river. The wrecked car remained precariously on the water. It was with difficulty that the injured were taken from the wreckage without falling into the river.

FORBES BACKS WIFE IN SUIT ON ALIENATION

That the charming wife of A. Holland Forbes, the daring aeronaut, who has hosts of friends in Boston and throughout Massachusetts, filched the affections of Ernest Rowley, an expert chauffeur formerly in their employ, is the allegation set forth in a suit brought against Mrs. Forbes for $75,000 damages in the Superior Court of New Haven by Mrs. Ida Rowley, the wife of the auto driver.

Mrs. Rowley says that she has intercepted fifty-six letters between her husband and Mrs. Jessie Livingston Forbes, the wife of the aeronaut. Forbes, who is vice-president of the Aero Club of America, declared to-day that the case was one of blackmail; that his wife wrote only letters of a business character to the chauffeur, and that he proposed to stand by her in the ordeal which she faces.

The Forbeses live in the old Aaron Burr mansion at Bridgeport. When seen there Mrs. Forbes said:

"Rowley has not been in our employ for over two years. The suit is simply a case of blackmail and is ridiculous in my eyes as well as in the eyes of my husband.

Will Fight to End.

"It is, of course, a very disagreeable matter, but Mr. Forbes and I have agreed that we have been chosen as the targets of unprincipled persons hunting for money and that we must make the most of a bad situation."

"What about the fifty-six letters which Mrs. Rowley said you wrote to her husband?" she was asked.

"If there are any such letters they have been manufactured for the purpose of this suit. I know nothing at all about them," Mrs. Forbes replied.

Mr. Forbes said:

"The plaintiff has not a leg to stand on. We shall fight the suit to the bitter end, sooner than be coerced into giving up money in such a cause. Ernest Rowley was a good chauffeur till his habits got the better of him and I was forced to discharge him about a year ago.

"After that I did not hear of him until last Winter, when this Rowley woman came to us with a few letters my wife had written, giving Rowley his orders. She wanted $500 for the letters, but I flatly refused to be blackmailed into buying them, and I have no doubt it is out of resentment for my action then that this suit has been brought, in the hope of frightening us into a settlement.

Mrs. Rowley's Charges.

Mrs. Forbes is a strikingly handsome woman of middle age, while Rowley is a good-looking young chap, slight and clean shaven. He is a favorite among residents of Fairfield who know him. He became chauffeur for the Forbes family about November, 1906.

Mrs. Rowley alleges that for the two years following "the defendant, at different times and places, and by her arts, blandishments, wiles and seductions alienated from the plaintiff the love and affection of her husband, Ernest Rowley."

Further on Mrs. Rowley charges that: "The defendant has at different times and places during the two years prior to November, 1908, acted improperly with the plaintiff's husband."

GIRL NURSE FOR DOGS IS THE LATEST

A woman dog nurse—a new London fashion—is to be introduced into New York by Mrs. Tyler Morse, the beautiful young wife of the former Boston dog and horse enthusiast. This innovation is certain to cause much comment in the fashionable circles of America, where Mrs. Morse is well known.

The new nurse is on her way to New York from London. When on duty she will wear the trim uniform of the Canine Nurse's Institute with its scarlet letters embroidered upon the apron. The nurse will take care of Mrs. Morse's famous kennel of Old English sheep dogs.

Mr. Morse all through his Harvard days, showed a strong liking for bulldogs and when he met and married Miss Allans Fuller had a helpmeet who entered into his sports with great enthusiasm. Recently, when they were abroad together, they became interested in the Old English sheep dogs and purchased the best pair obtainable.

As a result Handsome Boy and Dame Doris, with a record of over 200 prize winners in England, reached New York. The dogs have since accumulated a fine bunch of blue ribbons on this side of the water. Mrs. Morse is one of the closest friends of the former Anna Gould, now the wife of Prince Helie de Sagan. Mr. Morse is president of the Bulldog Club of America.

WORLD'S GREATEST SCIENTIST TELLS VALUE OF POLE DISCOVERY

Sir Robert Ball Declares Cook's Addition to Knowledge Is Inestimable

To Mariners, Says the British Astronomer, the Momentous Exploit of the Intrepid American Must Bring Especial Gratification.

By SIR ROBERT BALL.

Former astronomer of the Royal Observatory, now professor of astronomy at Cambridge University, England, and one of the world's greatest scientists.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Two questions being asked all over the civilized world to-day are: First, why does any one want to go to the North Pole? Second, how does he know when he's there?

To answer the second question first, the mariner who finds his latitude in the northern hemisphere to be 90 degrees knows he can be nowhere else than at the North Pole. The astronomer will tell you that to any one standing at the North Pole the sun rises and sets only once a year—six months daylight, six months night, mitigated only by a little twilight at the beginning and end of a period of awful gloom, broken by occasional moonlight or aurora.

Nearest the Earth's Centre.

The Pole is truly a unique spot on the globe. Cook, standing there, faced due south. Whichever way he looked he was more than twenty miles nearer the centre of the earth than if he stood at the equator. His weight was greater than anywhere else on the surface of the globe. A plumbline in his hand pointed vertically upward to the pole of the heavens, around which all stars revolve. Half the stars he could never see; the other half went below his horizon and would have been visible throughout the six months of night. The famous constellation Orion ever circled around and around his horizon. The Pole star stood directly over his head.

The gain to knowledge from Dr. Cook's discovery is inestimable. There is still much to learn of tides, currents and the ocean. Meteorologists have a perfect torrent of questions to ask of any one speaking with authority from the North Pole.

But there is another problem of the highest importance, justifying all efforts to discover the Pole. Many scientists believe the Arctic regions have borne at certain times in the mighty history of our globe a very different aspect from now. The ice and snow, which have preserved the mystery of the Poles, probably have not existed continuously throughout the ages.

Fossils of Great Importance.

It is believed that in the course of geological time the regions around the Poles have more than once enjoyed a temperate climate, permitting highly organized animals and delicate plants to flourish. If specimens of rocks containing the remains of fossil animals and plants have been brought home, their scientific value could not be exaggerated. Thus, and thus only, could a very great chapter in the history of the earth be completed. Until the Poles are discovered man's knowledge of his dwelling place will be sadly defective.

To mariners Cook's momentous exploit must bring especial gratification. Hundreds of their hardiest forerunners have sacrificed their lives in the great quest which is now their prize before the aviators have had time to snatch it from them.

MRS. PEARY SCOFFS AT COOK'S STORY

SOUTH HARPSWELL, Me., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Robert E. Peary, wife of the Arctic explorer now in polar seas, in an interview at her Summer home on Eagle Island, Casco Bay, scoffs at Dr. Cook's discovery, and emphatically declares her belief that her husband will be the man to find the Pole.

"It is a joke," is the terse way in which Mrs. Peary sums up Dr. Cook's discovery. She also thinks that Dr. Cook tried in every way to discredit her husband's exploits.

Following is Mrs. Peary's comment regarding the discovery of the great goal by the Brooklyn doctor:

BY MRS. ROBERT E. PEARY.

I've been expecting to hear this report ever since I knew Dr. Cook started for the Pole. It's been a standing joke at the Explorers' Club and in our set in New York.

It is a great surprise to me that Dr. Cook has been able alone and with but two Eskimo boys to accomplish in so short a time what so many others of much greater experience and better equipment have failed in doing. I am sorry Dr. Cook has wrested the honor of discovering the Pole from my husband, but I congratulate him.

If Dr. Cook has discovered the Pole, he will have to bring back some of Mr. Peary's records to prove to the world he has been farther north. You know it's customary for all explorers to leave records in their own handwriting in cairns built of stone. The following explorers must copy that record, place the copy in the cairn and bring back the original. Dr. Cook may have found the going too good or may have gone by water and not had time to stop for records. Of course, the cairn must be built on the land, for the ice, always moving, gives no support.

I hardly believe Dr. Cook will give out much of a story of the details of his discovery until he gets in communication with the newspapers. He is too clever, too shrewd not to realize the money value of the story of the true discovery.

I can't help recalling the story of Dr. Cook's ascent of Mount McKinley, about which he wrote his book. You know in that book he says he ascended the mountain, looked at his aneroid and then came down again. When the scientists wanted to know how high the mountain was he said he was in such a hurry he couldn't stop to compute the altitude.

At that time Dr. Cook was alone, too. He had gone out with the expedition in charge of Professor Parker of Harvard and was in the party that failed in their attempt at scaling the summit. When Professor Parker came home he left Dr. Cook in charge of the supplies for the next attempt.

Husband Will Find Pole.

Dr. Parker had hardly reached the East when the news came of Dr. Cook's ascent of the mountain, but for me to say anything at this time might be construed as bad taste. I do feel loyal to my husband, however, and I have been expecting to hear from him any day. I have a feeling that he will bring the Pole back with him. If he does then it is for him to talk of this report, for he could either prove or disprove it; I can't.

I know if Mr. Peary was within but five feet of the Pole and did not reach it he would say exactly where he had been. He is very honest, painfully so, I tell him. He has set his heart on his goal, and I hope for his own sake he finds it. As for confirmation of any reports from Eskimos, they couldn't tell the Pole from a barber pole.

I have told Dr. Peary jokingly that he has held on to his quest so long he can't drop it; that he can't take his medicine. But he is a born geographer and feels that while there is a square inch of the world's surface undiscovered we are backward. Then, of course, as a scientist, he is fitted to establish just what is at the Pole and give the exact facts to the scientific world.

FIALA PRAISES COOK SUCCESS IN POLE HUNT

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—In the opinion of Anthony Fiala, who commanded the second Ziegler expedition in search of the North Pole, Dr. Frederick A. Cook's declaration of his remarkable achievement is entirely trustworthy.

"I am thoroughly convinced that Dr. Cook reached the Pole," said Mr. Fiala to an AMERICAN reporter to-day at his office, No. 60 Liberty street.

Mr. Fiala is now connected in an important capacity with the Realty Trust Company. He is the youngest man ever intrusted with the command of a polar exploration party. He was a member of the first expedition dispatched in search of the Pole by the late William Zeigler of Brooklyn.

Mistakes of Others.

"In the first place," Mr. Fiala went on, "I have absolute confidence in Dr. Cook's veracity. I have known him a long time. From the inception of his daring enterprise I had faith that he would establish a new farthest North record and return alive, if he should not actually achieve his great purpose.

"The mistake that has been made by nearly every polar searcher was that the start was made too late in the Spring when the ice was beginning to break up. Solid polar ice is as safe to travel over as dry land.

"But Dr. Cook chose a route that had comparatively few of these obstacles. Indeed, it appears that after he had made a third of his perilous journey he had a straight stretch of about a hundred miles of smooth ice.

"This enabled him to increase the average speed per day to twelve miles. I dare say that if he had not had this good luck he could not have covered the nearly five hundred miles in thirty-five days.

Travel Uncertain.

"It should be understood that seasonable weather variations are as common in the polar region as in other climates. In other words, should Dr. Cook start to the Pole again over exactly the route that led him to victory and at exactly the same time he might encounter heavy winds or great ice heaps all the way. These would so impede his progress that he could not possibly repeat his marvellous achievement in the same length of time."

United States Will Defend Flag At Pole Declares Wickersham

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—That the flag planted by Dr. Cook on the new Arctic continent will be defended by the United States was the opinion expressed to-day by Attorney-General Wickersham in an interview at his Summer home at Lawrence Beach, L. I.

"The Constitution will follow the flag if the new land discovered by Cook proves to be of any value," said Mr. Wickersham. "The new territory may perhaps not prove a very valuable acquisition, but if human beings can live there or if there are native races living there, a serious question of citizenship will have to be considered."

TAFT TO GREET EXPLORER COOK

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—President Taft will be the first to greet Dr. Cook upon his arrival in his native land, according to present plans.

Innumerable festivities of various sorts are already under consideration and Dr. Cook will be received in a manner befitting the greatest explorer of the age and the man who has brought America the greatest honor possible in times of peace.

The Arctic Club of America will give a grand dinner to Dr. Cook, at which it is expected he will reveal for the first time the data by which he will conclusively prove that he reached the Pole. The Explorers' Club will co-operate with the Arctic Club and all the great explorers of America will be present to extend their congratulations in person.

List of Distinguished Guests.

The Duke d'Abruzzi, Dr. Nansen, Captain Ronald Amundsen, who discovered the Northwest Passage; Rear-Admiral George Melville, Anthony Fiala, General A. W. Greely, William Ziegler and Captain Joseph E. Bernier are among those to whom invitations will be sent by the joint clubs.

Dr. Cook, if he returns home at once, should reach New York by the middle of this month. Captain B. S. Osborn, secretary of the Arctic club, speaking for the two clubs to-day, said that it might be necessary for Dr. Cook to make stops because the European countries are clamoring for the honor of his presence, and in this event it would be early in October before he arrives here.

"If Dr. Cook takes advantage of the first feasible opportunity he should have no difficulty in getting here by the middle of September," said Captain Osborn. "However, owing to the extraordinary international interest among scientists and geographers he may make many stops which would delay his arrival.

May Linger in Denmark.

"The length of time which the conference of geographers and scientists with Dr. Cook in Copenhagen will last is uncertain. After that Dr. Cook may go to Christiania to visit Captain Amundsen. Dr. Cook, through having taken part in a prior Belgian expedition and having been decorated with an order for his services there may make a stop of some length in that country. He may also stay for a time in England."

The Explorers' Club and Antarctic Club are trying to arrange a banquet at which Dr. Cook and Lieutenant E. H. Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, may meet. Dr. Cook is one of the vice-presidents of the Explorers' Club and Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, U. S. N. (retired), is the president. The other vice-presidents are George Gardner of Cleveland, Ohio; Dillon Wallace, William S. Champ and Littleton Smith of Washington.

CANADA SETS UP A CLAIM TO NEW NORTHERN LANDS

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 3.—In government circles the view is taken that the discovery of the North Pole by an American does not affect Canada's title to the sovereignty of all land which lies to the westward of Greenland and between the northern shores of Canada proper and the Pole.

These lands have been visited by many American explorers, particularly Lieutenant Peary, and many islands are named after Presidents of the United States. Canada never has abandoned claims to this territory, and Captain Bernier at present is in Arctic waters planting British flags on all the islands at which he touches.

A high government officer said to-day that the Canadian government undoubtedly would contest any claim to the territory in these regions which might be set up by virtue of Dr. Cook's discovery. He added, however, that Dr. Cook, like other American explorers, was not seeking the Pole with the object of adding to Uncle Sam's territory, and that the government did not expect any trouble.

EXPLORER BALDWIN NOW PLANNING NEW POLAR EXPEDITION

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—That the actual discovery of the North Pole and the discovery of the South Pole in the near future will be a great stimulus to Arctic explorations and probably start a rush of scientists and students to the Polar regions, is the belief of Evelyn B. Baldwin, the Polar explorer and meteorologist.

"Dr. Cook's achievement was wonderful," said Mr. Baldwin to-day. "He was extremely fortunate in finding a chain of islands on which game was plentiful and whose surface was smooth to within five degrees of the Pole. The assistance rendered by the Esquimaux was also very valuable and a lot of the credit is due to them.

"The skepticism of many persons regarding Dr. Cook's remarkable feat of travelling 500 miles in thirty-five days over the frozen land, is not well founded, for such a thing is not impossible under favorable circumstances. I think the finding of the South Pole will be much easier, because there is a continent around it and the ice is, therefore, stationary, while the Arctic ice is constantly shifting and breaking up.

"I am getting up an expedition to cross the Arctic sea and expect to start soon. We will proceed in a strong vessel through Bering strait and will then make the vessel fast in the ice pack. Then, at the rate of two miles a day, we hope to drift completely through the northern ocean and we hope to come out somewhere between the northeast coast of Greenland and Spitzbergen.

"We will be able to make many side trips with the aid of dirigible balloons, and the expedition should get in valuable specimens and records of meteorological observations.

"I expect to find land to the west of Crocken Land. Unless I am much mistaken, ours will be hailed as the first ship to cross the northern ocean."

TRUTH STAMPED ON COOK REPORT, SAY FAMOUS MEN

Professor Levi W. Mengel of Reading, Pa:

"He got there by sheer nerve and grit, backed by sound study of the conditions he had to contend with."

J. R. Tyrrell, an eminent engineer of Toronto:

"Dr. Cook is just the kind of a man who might be likely to do it. He would go as far as he could without the slightest concern as to how he was going to get back."

Professor Louis A. Bauer of Carnegie Institute, Washington, D. C.:

"That telegram to his wife is not very definite, but I think Dr. Cook has hit the Pole. He is the manner of man who would use the word 'successful' for nothing else."

Anthony Fiala, Arctic explorer:

"Dr. Cook says he has discovered land in the Far North. If the land is there others will find it and verify his story."

Charles F. Buffum of Somerville:

"Dr. Cook's statement that he made his way to the Pole may be accepted as true, for the man is absolutely reliable."

Lieutenant E. H. Snackelton, Antarctic explorer:

"No one has a right to be skeptical."

Lieutenant John N. Truden, Arctic explorer:

"He must have had to make seventeen miles a day for thirty-five days, but from what I have read of his account I believe he did it."

Dillon Wallace, explorer:

"Peary undoubtedly would have accomplished what Dr. Cook has done if he had been better acquainted with the dangerous conditions in the frozen sea. Dr. Cook took advantage of Peary's failure."

Dr. L. O. Wolfe, surgeon with Peary:

"Dr. Cook violated ethics of polar expeditions by using part of route Peary had been working on."

TWICE JILTED GIRL SWALLOWS ACID

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—With her wedding trousseau spread on her bed beside her, Yetta Krimmell, a pretty nineteen-year-old working girl, was found unconscious in her room by her mother at her home, 238 Metropolitan avenue, to-day. She had been jilted for the second time by her lover, Benjamin B. Bunschaft, who lived in the neighborhood, and who went to Boston several days ago. From there he sent her a postal card, which she received yesterday, the date set for their wedding. It read:

"Don't you care, Yetta; we are friends yet. Why don't you come to Boston?"

It was signed "Boston Baked Beans."

Early this morning the girl took a dose of carbolic acid. She was rushed to a hospital, where it is believed her life will be saved.

7,000 IDLE OVENS RAISE COKE PRICE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 3.—Seven thousand coke ovens are idle and there is a loud cry from coke operators because of a shortage of labor, with price of coke the highest for many years. One cause of the shortage is the number of foreigners who left the coke fields for Europe in the Fall and Winter of 1907. Another cause attributed by the Independent Coke Producers' Association is intemperance, the allegation being that the beer and whiskey consumed by foreign workmen render many of them unfit for more than two or three days' work a week.

SHOT IN CROWDED STREET.

ARMOURS FED COOK ON TRIP TO THE POLE

All the world is asking how Dr. Cook accomplished the modern miracle of planting Old Glory on the top of the world, what made possible his titanic feat of travelling over ice hammocks with the thermometer at 85 degrees below zero at the almost incredulous rate of 17 miles a day for thirty-five days.

Armour & Company, the great Chicago packers, to-day furnish the answer. A specially condensed food product with which they equipped Dr. Cook's expedition made his success possible. Side by side with the Stars and Stripes nailed to the North Pole their announcement tells the world that American business enterprise made it possible to put the flag there. American business and Old Glory went to the pole together.

Joseph E. Twombly, representing Armour & Company in Boston, and Davis Brothers at Gloucester co-operated in fitting Dr. Cook's ship with meat and provisions. Cook carried sixteen different sorts of canned meats, and these were cached along his route as he went North.

When he finally got to the apparent limit of human endurance and it was impossible to attempt to carry bulky provisions further, he made his final dash, carrying nothing but a few bricks of pemmican. A man may travel on a pocketful of this for a week even in the Arctic. His two Esquimaux boys also carried it and some was taken for the dogs. It did the job. Armour & Co. claim that pemmican made the Pole possible.

Mr. Twombly said to-day that the same food was furnished to Peary, Wellman, Baldwin, Zeigler and Nansen, but it was given to Dr. Cook in an improved form. He took a ton of it. This is equivalent to ten tons of beef in bulk. Pemmican is made of the choicest beef, thoroughly trimmed and with all sinews taken out. It is dried, ground into powder and mixed with choicest beef suet, seeded raisins and currants. Then it is seasoned with salt, pepper and sugar. It is made into bricks much the size of an ordinary building brick, quite as hard and about as heavy.

Dr. Cook also carried hams and bacon which were especially cured for him in a carefully prepared smoke for three weeks. All along the trail that Dr. Cook travelled he has left imperishable evidence of his journey in the discarded cans of Armour & Company, and men who follow in his footsteps will find American enterprise in this way blazed from Upernavik to the Pole itself.

New Photo of Pretty Boston Girl Artist Earle's New "Mental Mate"

Miss Gertrude Dunn.

INTERVALE, N. H., Sept. 3.—"You must know my position. I have been living here quietly all Summer, and am trying to forget the cruel world and regain my shattered heart. I am in no position to talk. My brother will see you."

Mrs. Julia Kuttner Earle, the second wife of Ferdinand Pinney Earle, who has gone abroad with his new "mental mate," Gertrude Belle Dunn, of Boston, was found to-day by a BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent in this secluded, but beautiful, resort, where she has been living under her maiden name all Summer.

The above words, spoken calmly, but in a tone of deep sadness, comprised all she would say regarding her husband's latest quest for his "soul's true mate."

Beware of Imitations.

Cheap Substitutes and "Just As Good As."

Unscrupulous dealers, mindful only of profit and caring nothing for the health of their patrons, are offering for sale low-grade, impure whiskey, which they tell you is as "good as Duffy's."

It is a cheap concoction and fraud, intended to deceive the people. Of course, when a remedy has been before the public so long, has been prescribed and used by the best doctors and in all the prominent hospitals, and has carried the blessing of health into so many thousands of homes as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has, imitations are bound to arise. But they can imitate the bottle and label only—no one can imitate the contents.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus producing a liquid food, requiring no digestion, in the form of a medicinal whiskey, which is one of the most effective tonic stimulants and invigorators known to science; its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

BEWARE OF FRAUDS!

Any firm that will sell imitation or substitution goods will sell impure goods. The firm that is dishonest in one thing would not hesitate to be dishonest in another. Whenever you see imitation and substitution goods offered for sale by a firm, beware of anything and everything put up by that firm. You endanger your own life and the lives of your family and friends by dealing with them.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is sold in sealed bottles only—never in bulk. A facsimile of the genuine bottle is printed here, so that you may easily recognize it. It is our own patented bottle—round, amber colored, and with the name "Duffy Malt Whiskey Company" blown in the glass. The trademark—the Old Chemist's head—is on the label, and over the cork there is an engraved paper seal. Be certain this seal is not broken.

It is the only whiskey recognized by doctors everywhere as a family medicine. At all druggists, grocers, dealers, or direct. $1 a bottle.

OPEN BATTLE ON $1,000,000 NOBLE WILL

TAUNTON, Sept. 3.—A contest to break the $1,000,000 will of Elizabeth F. Noble of Mansfield by heirs-at-law living in California was precipitated to-day when a hearing was begun before Judge William E. Fuller in the Bristol Probate Court on the petition of heirs for the appointment of a third special administrator. By the will practically all of the $1,000,000 estate is left to churches and charity.

At a recent session of the court Robert H. Moore of New York and Charles C. Haggerty of Mansfield, who were named as executors in the will, were appointed special administrators to take charge of the estate, pending a settlement of the case.

To-day the contestants of the will asked that a third administrator be appointed from among the legatees, as it is alleged that the present administrators would not permit a free inspection of the papers of the estate.

Court Suggests Conference.

Attorney Andrew Jennings of Fall River appeared for the heirs, opposing the appointment of a third administrator. Clarence J. Shearn of New York appeared for one of the contestants, Mrs. Johnson.

"As special administrators have already been appointed, I doubt my jurisdiction," said Judge Fuller. "The matter could be brought before me on a question of removing the present administrators or a question of increasing their bond."

Judge Fuller then suggested that all of the parties confer and agree that the heirs might have access to all of the papers.

Mrs. Noble died last April in her Mansfield home at the age of ninety-four. She left an estate which was then estimated to be worth $850,000. Most of the estate was bequeathed to charitable and philanthropic organizations in Massachusetts. Since then several wills have been uncovered in New York, and a codicil has been found. Now it is estimated that the estate is worth $1,000,000.

Large Sums for Charity.

Several of Mrs. Noble's relatives in various parts of the country are contesting the will on the ground that she was mentally incompetent when the document was drafted. The will is dated Dec. 7, 1901, when Mrs. Noble was in her eighty-sixth year.

Mrs. Noble left no children. Her husband, a wealthy New York coal merchant, died forty years ago. For twenty years before her death Mrs. Noble lived in her Mansfield mansion with a maid.

6TH KELLEHER BODY EXHUMED FOR AUTOPSY

Professor Whitney of Harvard College for examination.

The first body exhumed was that of Catherine M. Kelleher, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mrs. Kelleher. She died July 23, 1908, at No. 7 Durham street, Somerville, from supposed ptomaine poisoning. Arsenic was found in the child's stomach. This was in January. Mrs. Kelleher was in the Cambridge Jail then charged with arson.

During the following weeks the bodies of the two other children and the sister-in-law were exhumed from the Arlington Cemetery.

Autopsies were performed on all of the bodies by Medical Examiner William D. Swan of Cambridge. He sent the contents of the four stomachs to Professor William F. Whitney of the Harvard Medical School for examination, and on February 10 last the latter reported to Dr. Swan that he had found arsenic in the stomachs. Upon this evidence Mrs. Kelleher was indicted by the Middlesex County Grand Jury and later held for the murder of the four persons.

District Attorney Higgins, when asked about the disinterment of the bodies, said: "Yes, we dug up two more of the bodies to-day. I did this after having gone over the case thoroughly, coming to the conclusion that in a case of this character six bodies would be better than four."

The District Attorney did not say it, but it was inferred from his remark that he expected to find poison in the viscera of the body of Mrs. Kelleher's husband as well as in that of the body of her sister.

The grand jury meets on Tuesday, and it is expected that if the new evidence is available by that time it will be presented to that body.

Mrs. Kelleher is in the East Cambridge prison and she has not been told about the important new move in the case.

WOMEN CLAD IN FURS ON BALLOON TRIP

NORTH EASTON, Sept. 3.—After a seven-hour trip through the air, covering a distance of one hundred and thirty-five miles, four New York society women, who made an ascension from North Adams at sunrise to-day in the balloon New York, with N. H. Arnold as pilot, landed here shortly after 11 o'clock to-day.

From the telegraph station they sent a message to North Adams which read:

"Had a fine trip; covered one hundred and thirty-five miles; descended easily."

They were Mrs. Thomas Hastings, daughter of E. C. Benedict, a noted whip and the president of the Four-in-Hand Club of New York, her husband, her brother-in-law, Clifford D. Harmon, and Mrs. Walter E. Maynard, daughter of Brayton Ives, the New York banker.

The party, wrapped in heavy furs, went east over the fair grounds at an altitude of 1,000 feet. Nearing the Hoosac Mountain they dropped sand and shot up to a greater height. When last seen they were sailing due east.

At Fitchburg to-day Charles J. Glidden and two passengers made flights in the balloon Massachusetts. Mr. Glidden sought to make new records for height, trying for an altitude of three miles.

LEAVES 38 CHILDREN.

INDIANA, Pa., Sept. 3.—Thirty-eight children mourn the death of their father, John W. Miller, aged 76 years, who died to-day at the county home here, where he had been an inmate for several years. Mr. Miller was married four times. A widow survives him.

SHOCKING CONFESSIONS will be told in the SUNDAY AMERICAN'S installment of the "Diary of a Faithless Husband." It ends Sunday.

ETNA CAPTAIN DENIES SPYING ON OUR FLEET

BALTIMORE, Sept. 3.—Charged with violating naval etiquette by lingering near the United States fleet at target practice off Cape Henry, Captain Baggio, commander of the Italian training ship Etna, now at anchor at Baltimore Harbor, makes the assertion that had the Americans not been so tardy in answering his salute there would have been no necessity for him to extend almost to the breaking point the international courtesy that obliges a ship saluting to remain in the vicinity while the other craft is given an opportunity to make the return salute.

The episode gave rise to the intimation that the foreigners spied on the Americans.

"I am indignant that such a matter has been given publication, and I am surprised as well," he said to-day. "Early Sunday morning the first of the American ships were sighted directly ahead and without changing our course we steamed toward them. As we reached the first ship in the line we gave the customary salute, but at the same time we did not know whether the fleet was at practice. Later when we found that they were it was too late for us to change our course and we kept on, passing ship after ship.

"In the meantime our salute had not been answered, and we slowed down passing between the ships and the targets for the simple reason that it was too late to swerve and go around.

"Under reduced speed we passed ship after ship, but not a gun was fired. When we found ourselves off the flagship of Admiral Schroeder, the last ship of the line, we were placed in the predicament of either running away or waiting for the salute. Courtesy demands the latter course, and we hove to waiting. After a time the salute was fired. This was at once accepted not only as a return of the courtesy, but all that was expected or wanted, and we continued on our way to the Capes, giving the matter no further thought."

CLYDE FITCH UNDER KNIFE; CRITICALLY ILL

CHALONS-SUR-MARNE, France, Sept. 3.—Clyde Fitch, the American playwright, is in a serious condition. He was suddenly stricken with an acute case of appendicitis while traveling from Germany in an automobile. Upon arriving here he was removed hastily to a private hospital and underwent an operation.

Dr. Alquier, who performed the operation, would not express an opinion to-day regarding Mr. Fitch, but it is understood that the patient's condition is critical.

More AMERICANS are read in the homes in Boston than any other paper.

TWO MILKMEN FINED.

Two South Boston milkmen were fined $15 each by Judge Logan of the District Court to-day for not keeping the milk on their wagons at the legal temperature, 50 degrees or below.

They were William H. Wellington of No. 176 Elm street, Everett, a driver for D. W. Whiting & Son, and Thomas J. Devine of No. 761 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, a driver for the Elm Farm Milk Company. Both appealed and were held in $200.

KETCHEL SAYS HE'LL BE A BIG CHAMP SOON

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—Carrying enough confidence to lick half a dozen Langfords and Johnsons if confidence is all the necessary essential to the job, a suit case with his famous fighting trunks snugly tucked away in its capacious interior, and more flesh than a middleweight is supposed to carry, Stanley Ketchel was due in New York this morning to meet Sam Langford September, 17.

Ketchel, gum-shoeing, suddenly appeared in this town for a few brief minutes on his way to the big town.

"I don't intend to make weight for Langford unless I have to," said the willing mauler from Grand Rapids. "I'll whip Langford just as sure as I am in Chicago, and as quickly as I get through with him I'll rush back to San Francisco and give Jack Johnson an artistic trimming in October. I'll be the heavyweight champion of the world just as sure as this is Friday.

"I'm almost ready to go in the ring with Sam Langford right now," declared Stanley. "I have been out in the mountains of California roughing it for several weeks and never felt better in my life."

While Ketchel was making his hurried entrance and exit from Chicago, Battling Nelson, lightweight champion and literary of Hegeswitch, arrived in the city and at once placed himself in the hands of a physician. The Dane is suffering from a slight ailment, which his doctor says will yield to treatment in a few weeks and will permit his fighting in two months.

"I'll be able to fight anybody in two months," said the would-be Mayor of Hegewisch. "I am to take a good rest for a few weeks and as soon as my doctor gets me in condition for travel I shall leave for Yellowstone Park for a good rest. When I have regained my best condition the best of lightweights better be on the lookout, for I am going to fight them all, provided I can get proper inducements.

"All of these lightweights look alike to me. I guess this fellow Wolgast, who has been claiming he whipped me, does not feel so big since Tommy Murphy got through with him. He did not beat me in Los Angeles, but I must admit he made a good showing.

"I'll fight any lightweight as soon as I feel that I am at my best. I will consider a match with McFarland at his own terms of 133 pounds, three hours before the fight, if he will stick to his agreement when he once makes it. I don't want to fight Packy at any weight at which he is not strong. When I get through whipping him I don't want him to say that he was not at his best."

TEAMS MAY TOUR WORLD.

According to Manager Clarke of the Pirates, he has been approached to make a world's tour if the Pirates win the National pennant with the winner of the American flag. Sam Bernard is the instigator of the scheme, so there be some comedy in it.

JOHNSON IS NEARLY PUT OUT IN BOUT

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—A straight left, spent by one Dave Mills, disturbed Jack Johnson's equanimity to-day, and brought the battle glint to his eye. It was in the second round of an open-air spar at Cockrell's, across the bay.

Johnson, who in the ordinary course of things can handle Mills as a cat toys with a mouse, was shuffling around, blocking Mills's lead and just showing enough of his fighting talent to keep the crowd interested. Suddenly Mills tip-toed and his left glove shot out straight and true. It took Johnson on the mouth and disturbed his golden smile.

Johnson's eyes snapped. He crouched and looked more like a fighter than he has done at any time since he began training? He feinted and then stepped in briskly. Tearing uppercuts were Mills' portion until Timekeeper Little warned Johnson to "cut out the rough stuff."

The effect of that prod on the mouth was with Johnson during the remainder of the four rounds. His footwork was lively and he drew away from the other man's swings in the nick of time once or twice. He waited statue-like for Mills' attack and he disarranged his opponents with left hooks that were delivered with worlds of quickness.

Kaufman sparred four rounds with heavyweight Lew Taylor of Oakland to-day and in addition went on the road and put in a full hour in Millet's gym.

YOUNG ERNE WINS OVER KID LOCKE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—Young Erne of Gray's Ferry marked his return to the ring in this city by defeating Kid Locke in the windup at the Broadway A. C. Erne had a hard punch which landed very often on Locke's stomach.

Both men fought carefully in the first round, Erne using a left jab and Locke a left swing. Erne displayed some of his former speed in the second round and landed at will on Locke's head and stomach. Locke rushed "Yi Yi" several times in the third and landed several stiff punches. These did not seem to worry Erne, as he jabbed Locke in the face, drawing blood. Erne again hit up a fast pace in the fourth round and chased Locke all over the ring. He continued his fast work in the fifth and sixth rounds, feinting his opponent out and landing at will.

TOM JONES THE LINK IN TIGER TEAM

DETROIT, Sept. 3.—Said a friend to Manager Jennings to a friend to-day:

"You've got Tom Jones. Now what are his good qualities?"

"Well," replied Hughie. "There is his congeniality of disposition, his consistency of playing, his willingness to sacrifice his own chances, opportunities for personal glory, for that of the team, and there is his constant desire to work in unison with the men who play on the same club. And these qualities I consider invaluable in a ball player."

Hughie was correct in what he said of Tom Jones. Jennings knew Jones long before the major leagues did. It was Hughie who sold Tom to St. Louis in 1903 for the sum of $1,500, and it was Hughie who suggested that Tom be brought to Detroit.

As a hitter Jones is no Rossman—not by any means. He generally gets in a heavy hit, though, and when it comes to sacrificing there are few men who have anything on him.

He is as game as any man that ever played, and he's not beaten till the game is over and the score is in favor of the other side.

On the Detroit team Tom is the necessary link. He fields better than Rossman, and there isn't a man who can get the ball to the plate any faster than Jones can. Runners won't take any chances with him, and he has the confidence of everybody on the team—something which goes a great way.

OFF DAY FOR DOVES; PLAY GIANTS NEXT

The Doves are resting from their labors, there being no game scheduled this afternoon. To-night the team leaves for New York where for four games they will be the guests of the Giants. The Doves return next Wednesday and open again with the Phillies for a brief stay.

Five of the players will be left behind, Ferguson, Dahlen, White, Beck and Siner being the stay at homes.

Well, we whaled those Pirates, and whaled them plenty for one game at least. What does it matter about that second game, anyway. It wouldn't have done us any good to win it and that Pittsburg outfit needs every game it can get to land the pennant.

The main thing is that we accomplished what we have been trying without avail to do all season—take one measly little game from Honus Wagner and his co-workers.

The win of the first session of the double-header was no fluke either. The Pittsburg men played all the ball they knew, but Harry Smith and his youngsters showed them a class of playing they have not been accustomed too even when playing with the top-notchers.

Cliff Curtis, the latest recruit to the Doves pitching staff was the bright and shining star, and he allowed the heaviest swatters in the country to garner but five little bingles off his delivery. That President Dovey has unearthed a star of the first magnitude is the belief of every one of the four thousand fans who attended the double performance.

In addition to this that kid infield—composed of Autrey, Shean, Coffey and Getz—worked like veterans and individually and collectively they performed like a bunch of pennant winners.

There is little question but that President Dovey has the nucleus of a fast baseball team for next season, and with a man like Harry Smith to lead them, there is every reason to believe that they will be fighting among the leaders.

RED SOX HOMEWARD BOUND TO PLAY THE FINAL PENNANT GAMES

To-day the Red Sox are hurrying home from Detroit, glad to get away from Tigerland. After the visit with the Jennings crowd they have but one thought uppermost in their minds. To hand out to the Tigers the same kind of hospitality that was served them the past three days and take every game.

What promised to be the greatest series on the Red Sox trip, the windup with the Tigers was a dismal disappointment so far as the Red Sox were concerned. There were three hard fights on the card, but the Tigers, spurred on by Chief Jennings and the infusion of new talent, played the kind of ball that made them champions.

Lake's teams did better than break even on the trip, a satisfactory result on a western invasion, battling with the clubs that consider they have a look in for the highest positions. In spite of the overthrow by the Tigers the Red Sox will get one of the wildest ovations ever accorded a Boston team when it lines up on the Back Bay field to-morrow with the Highlanders.

The team is yet a championship possibility. That is conceded by the best of judges, the two important factors on which the prospects depend being the condition of the men on the home stretch and the twenty odd games to be played at the tall end of the season on the home grounds.

One of the strongest signs that the players are co-operating with one another to bring about the best results was the action of Henry Niles and Heinie Wagner who went into the game yesterday though crippled and would have been excused for the day considering their injuries, but they stuck by the ship and that's the kind of stuff which will make the Athletics and the Tigers have many sleepless nights thinking of what they must deal with before the bunting is nailed.

The Red Sox are not so far away now, seven and a half games in the rear of the Tigers, as to be counted out as a contender, it position is anything. The Tigers will have to maintain the swiftest gait they ever did to outstrip such steller teams as the Red Sox and Athletics and to carry the pennant West again.

To-morrow the return of the Speed Boys will be greeted with proper decorations. Then on Labor Day one of the biggest crowds on the September holiday will surely be in attendance.

After playing two games the Red Sox jump over to Washington to play at the Capital in a three game series and finish up with a couple at Philadelphia with the Quakers.

Then September 13 will be the starting point of the Red Sox final stab for the pennant, as the team returns home on that date to play consecutive till October 4, meeting all the Western clubs in a row.

KLING WILL STRIKE SNAG IN CHICAGO

CINCINNATI, Sept. 2.—Johnny Kling won't play with his team against Logan Squares in Chicago, as he planned, if President Charles Murphy of the Cubs can prevent him, and he says he can. After reading a newspaper story to the effect that Kling was going to take a team of semi-professional players to Chicago next week to play semi-professional ball in Chicago and vicinity, Murphy wrote Kling that if he attempted to play his team in Chicago a restraining order will be sought in court.

PIRATES LAND BROCKTON PITCHER

Ralph Cutting, a Maine boy, who for the last three years has pitched for the Brockton team of the New England League, has been sold to the Pittsburg Pirates. Cutting is a southpaw and the youngest twirler in the league. He has everything that makes a fine pitcher and will join the Pittsburg team at the end of the New England League season.

BIG DAY FOR SONDER BOATS AT MARBLEHEAD

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

JOHNSON WILL TOUR THE WORLD AFTER HIS FIGHTS

STRAIGHT DOPE FOR SPORT FANS

IT HAPPENS EVERY DAY.

What's a pitcher going to do, Pete, when the team is playing bum?
Has he got to do it all, Pete, hain't they got to help him sum?

Two men down and all is fine, the manager
boots the ball,
And to square himself with fans, Pete,
hands you a nasty call.

Up comes a dub who's always known to pull back from the plate,
And Mr. Boss, the bonehead, signs you,
"Put it over straight!"

The guy then lams it on the nose, it goes
as far as Nome,
An' when the smoke has cleared away two men have piked round home.

An' then a jay reporter goes and writes
it down for type
I'm such a green one in the box I never will get ripe.

OLNEYVILLE READER—MANY thanks for them kind wu-urds. It's a relief to receive a letter of appreciation which does not have attached a boost of the writer's own game or a knock for the other fellow. You are safe in setting in the family plate and tapping the baby's bank that any thing you see in this column is straight dope as I see it. I may make a mistake once in a while, but you can let them write their own tickets on the fact that no one has a string on anything that I print.

KID McCOY IS BACK FROM PARIS and out with a strong knock against that sinful place. He says that the Dukes and Counts over there are a cheap bunch and that Paris is a poor place for anyone who is broke. I used to drill around with a bunch of Dukes and Counts before I reformed, usen't I, Kid, and I agree that they ain't much when it comes to loosening up. Why, I remember once I tried to make a touch, and—but what's the use of going into the harrowing details. I didn't get it. And, by the way, if any of you know a good one to be broke in, kindly send the address.

MANY OF YOU PIKERS STRINGING along with Mutt these days? The old sport is coming into his own again and sharpshooting with great regularity. I reckon Black Mate at 7 to 1 is pretty bad, what? That's how Mutt copped yesterday, and he had the whole works down. He's run that shoestring up to 48 bucks now and he's liable to come home on the chuscrap again to-day. Better string along with him.

Straight Dope Editor:
Dear Sir—Is "Mutt & Co.," ever coming out in book form? If not, can I obtain all the back numbers? Has Mutt any scruples? I think he would take a dead mouse from a blind kitten and sell the hide of the mouse as a pen wiper. But Mutt is all right, if you enter into the spirit of the plot.
Sorry to bother you this way, but Mutt has cost me money, which I don't grudge. If Mutt ever gets lost, let him buy a Boston American, it is the "Leading Home Paper." Catch it!
Yours truly, FERDINAND QUILL.

Whether or not Mutt "will come out in book form" rests entirely with Mr. Bud Fisher, the talented artist who created him, and I do not know what he has in his mind. I do not believe you can get a complete set of back numbers, but what are coming out daily in the Evening American are well worth saving and lots of people are doing it. As to Mutt's scruples, the only one I have ever discovered is against a chance to place a bet on the ponies. Did you ever want money for that purpose yourself, and want it pretty bad? If you did, you know how Mutt reasons it out, when he thinks he has doped out a live one or has a hunch.

CONSTANT READER.—THE FASTEST time ever made by a trotter is credited to Lou Dillon, who reeled off the mile behind a wind shield in 1:58½. Without the wind shield she made it in 2:01, which is also a record. The fastest mile made in a race belongs to Hamburg Belle, the mark being 2:01¼.

HERE IS A YOUNGSTER WHO knows what he wants and does not hesitate to ask for it. If this place is not conspicuous enough he can get it in display type by application at the business office:

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Will you kindly place the following in as conspicuous a place as possible in your paper. The Beacon A. A. of Watertown, Mass., wish to arrange a game with a fast 15 or 16-year-old team for September 6. This challenge applies to such teams as St. Marys of Charlestown, Roxbury Centrals and Trojan A. C. of Roxbury. Hope to see this in the BOSTON AMERICAN. MANAGER.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
The Hillside Club of Roslindale challenge the White Sox of West Roxbury for a game of baseball if they know how to play it; if not, we can show them. We have tried repeatedly to arrange a game with this club or whatever they are, but have failed because they are afraid we will give them a trimming. We hope they will see this and wake up.
Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM UNDERWOOD,
Manager of Hillside Club.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
The Hillside Jrs. of Medford claim they won the game of August 28, on their grounds, with the Auburns of Cambridge by the score of 4 to 3, but that is a mistake for the score was 4 to 4, and the Hillside Jrs. squealed in the first of the ninth when the Auburns made their 4th run. There was a man on third, and two out in the first of the ninth when the man at the bat hit the ball towards third and beat the throw to first, the umpire called him safe, but the Hillsides kicked against the decision and would not play any more. They claim we are a 16-year-old team, but we can prove we are a 14 to 15-year-old team. We would like to play a series of games with them, with the next game on our grounds if they are not afraid. JOHN DALY,
Manager of Auburns, 65 Pearl street, Cambridge, Mass.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
I would like to hear from some of those aspirants for the amateur championship of the State, namely the Buchanans of South Boston, Rexalls of Wakefield, Carnation of Worcester, now held by my team, the Notre Dames of Roxbury, who have played all over the State this year, winning 19 out of 22 games played. Have open dates for September up to first Saturday in October. Address
M. S. BRODERICK,
Manager Notre Dame Champions, 23 Eulda street, Roxbury.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Saw your article in Wednesday's edition about the game between the Cawthorne baseball team and the Bunker Hills. All I know about the matter is that we played a team with Bunker Hill in their suits and we won by a score of 15 to 7. If Mr. Flye, their manager, wants a game, why don't he write to me instead of trying to get away with such a bluff as he gave you? The only open date we have is the 11th. If Mr. Flye has a good memory, he will remember that he was the pitcher that day, and we do not blame him for getting a new team. Yours respectfully,
L. L. JENKINS,
Manager Cawthorne B. B. Team.
312 Meridian Street.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Will you kindly tell me "Bonehead Barry's" batting average; also how many hits, runs and stolen bases he has purloined, and also his salary. Yours,
DANIEL ("GROUCH") A'HEARN,
146 Beach Street, Revere.

I'll try to hunt up the records for you, although it will take considerable research. What are you trying to do, Grouch, get Barry's old job?

DO ANY OF YOU FANS KNOW DANIEL H. Mullen? Joseph Mullen has asked the BOSTON AMERICAN to help him and his brother and sister to find their brother, Daniel H., who has been missing from home for eleven years. He is twenty-five years old, and his father was well known in baseball circles, having once been a prominent player of the game. His brother is now living at No. 6 Silsbee court, Lynn.

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

Two more different nine-hole golf courses than those of the Winchester and Brockton links could hardly be found. The former by nature the best spot for a course and with a few more assets that nature and clever work has given them, the club may well boast of having an ideal course. The Brockton club, however, has had to make the whole course itself, and it has done remarkably well. Although the turf is hard and dry, each year shows a marked improvement in the various holes.

Next Saturday the Myopia Hunt Club holds the eighth meeting of the ten that it had planned for the summer, inviting the players from Salem, Essex County and the Nahant Golf Club. The meeting this week will be foursomes, with the entries by pairs. It is assured that the meeting will be well attended and enjoyed by all.

An interesting four-ball match has been arranged by the Hackensack Golf Club to be played over its course Wednesday, October 6th. The contestants will be two amateurs and two professionals, all of great renown. Walter J. Travis of Garden City with Tom Vardon of England as a partner will meet Findlay S. Douglas, Nassau Country Club, and Alec Smith, the professional at the Wykagyl Country Club.

Next Saturday the Worcester Golf Club will hold its annual open tournament. Many of the crack golfers who would participate are on their way to Chicago, but notwithstanding this loss, the tourney will attract a good field and many Boston players will go out to play the course.

TIGERS CLEANED UP.

LIL ARTHA IS GOING TO TOUR THE WORLD IF—

By TAD.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Lil Artha Johnson intends touring the world after his fights with Kaufman and Ketchel out West. While resting after a bout with Young Peter Jackson, at his Emeryville quarters, the bonbon buddy of the heavyweights chirped in a happy way.

"I'm going to stay here in California until I finish the fights I have signed for, and after that I will box in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, meeting all comers. Of course, should Jeffries declare himself ready to fight, then all my other matches will be off. Jeff first; he comes before all the others because he's the greatest card, and then the public wants to see him meet me. I'm not barring any one from a fight. After my trip East I intend boxing on the other side, and will take on McVey in Paris and Langford in London, if the National Club will offer money enough.

"I'm in good fettle right now, my weight being 226 pounds. Of course, it's more than I ever weighed in my life before, but I'll get down to a nice figure before Sept. 9, when I meet Al Kaufman."

Kaufman, who is to meet Johnson, has been up to the mountains working, but now is settled at Joe Millet's training quarters, where he is working with both Harry Foley and Jack Cordell. Eddie Smith, of Oakland, will be the man in the ring, and although no decision is to be given, it is said that Smith will settle all bets with his judgment.

* * *

Manager Ebbets, of the Dodgers should sign up Dr. Cook, who discovered the North Pole. The medico might discover a team for Brooklyn.

* * *

W. O. McGeehan, the Joaquin Miller of Frisco, scribbled the following across the parchment the other day. Sad and touching, eh?

SO LONG, JEFF.

Here he lies beneath the daisies
And the tall alfalfa trees,
Some declare he was a fighter,
Others claim he was a cheese.
Had he lived another hundred
Maybe he would really fight,
For he murmured as he shuffled,
"I will fight when I am right."
Who can tell what might have happened
If he didn't have to croak?
Drop a silent tear in passing,
For he might have cleaned the smoke.
Yes, we heard his burning message—
Every morning, every night—
And we read it in the papers,
"I will fight when I am right."
Pause another moment, stranger,
Lift your hat and stand in awe,
For he might have settled Johnson
With a wallop to the jaw!
See! 'Tis written on his headstone,
Carved in letters big and bright,
Is the phrase he made immortal;
"I will fight when I am right."

* * *

Johnny Coulon has written Jim Coffroth offering to meet Monte Attell out there for the world's championship in October. He says he has been offered three fights here in the East, but will go West on a good offer. Monte Attell was coming East, but may take the date if it is offered.

Joe Wagner and Philly McGovern settle the Eastern honors a week from Monday at the Bedford Club in Brooklyn.

GOLD WATCHES FOR WINNING ATHLETES

Many local athletes will go to Worcester next Wednesday night to compete in the electric light games at the New England Fair on the Agricultural Society grounds. There will be gold and silver watches for first and second prizes and specially designed pins for thirds.

There are eight events on the card, including 100-yard dash, 220-dard dash, 440-yard dash, 880-yard run, mile run, high jump, pole vault and team race.

CITY POINTS WANT GAMES.

Owing to cancellation, the City Points of South Boston are without a game for Saturday and Labor Day and will play any seventeen-eighteen-year-old team. Half fares given. C. Lane, telephone 21032 South Boston, between 7 and 8 p. m.

MATTY TRAINS FOR WOLGAST

Matty Baldwin writes from Highland lake where he is training at Mike Deveney's farm for his fight with Wolgast at the Armory A. A. next Tuesday night that he was never better in his life. He is backed up in this statement by Jack McCloskey who is making him toe the line in getting ready for this important battle which may mean the future making of Matty.

After working yesterday he scaled 128 pounds. He gets up in the morning at 7 o'clock every day. Has breakfast at 7:30 and goes on the road at 8:30 and does five miles. Then comes dinner at 12 o'clock and at 2 he takes a nap till 3:30. He goes in the gym punches the bag for eight rounds then boxes five rounds with Freddie O'Brien. After roughing it with the gloves he skips rope and this completes his routine work.

Baseball News and Notes

Joe Lake, the New York American pitcher, lists golf next to baseball. When a boy he was a caddie and became enamored of the game.

* * *

Charlie O'Leary of Detroit is deeply cast down since the departure of his side kick, Schaefer, and it is likely the Chicago player will be traded by the Tigers.

* * *

Jack Dunn of Baltimore has expressed a desire for the services of Charley Smith of Washington. This may block the deal to sell Smith to Minneapolis.

* * *

Pitchers McIntyre and Rucker and Third Baseman Lennox of the Brooklyn team, will accompany Frank Bancroft's team to Cuba at the end of the season. Bancroft, known as "Banny," is the business manager of the Cincinnati Reds.

Garry Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati team, brought a new mascot from the mountains of Montana. The mascot is seventeen years of age and is little more than three feet tall. He was a page in the Montana Senate.

* * *

John Ganzel, handling the Rochester team in the Eastern League, is being mentioned as the successor of Harry Lumley as manager of the Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers.

Rube Waddell is crowing over the hold he retains upon the American League fans in Philadelphia. On the day he last pitched against the Mack men a crowd of 8,500 turned out in the face of a threatened downpour. Ordinarily the attendance would have been less than 5,000. Rube filed a claim for a commission on the extra 3,500, but hasn't collected yet.

* * *

It is reported that Manager McGraw lets out 11,000 roars every time he looks at Marquard.

[illegible] is entitled to some return for the money Brush spent for the Rube.

The philosophy of Bresnahan's trading bee is that it is better to have all the positions well covered than to have an infield defence that alternates strong and weak in spots.

9 RACES ON CARD FOR LABOR DAY

The regatta and executive committees of the N. E. A. R. A. opened and passed on the entries for the Labor Day regatta at a meeting held at the new Union Boat Club.

Nine races in all filled and the prospect for a good day's sport is particularly encouraging. The regatta will start at 9 in the forenoon.

Life Talks With Death
By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner.

SAID Life to Death, "Methinks if if I were you
I would not carry such an awesome face
To terrify the helpless human race.
And if, indeed, those wondrous tales be true
Of happiness beyond, and if I knew
About the boasted blessing of that place
I would not hide so miserly all trace
Of my vast knowledge, Death, if I were you.
But, like a glorious angel, I would lean
Above the pathway of each sorrowing soul,
Hope in my eyes and comfort in my breath,
And strong conviction in my radiant mien,
The while I whispered of that beauteous goal.
This would I do if I were you, O Death."

Said Death to Life, "If I were you, my friend,
I would not lure confiding souls each day
With fair, false smiles to enter on a way
So filled with pain and trouble to the end.
I would not tempt those whom I should defend.
Nor stand unmoved and see them go astray;
Nor would I force unwilling souls to stay.
Who longed for freedom, were I you, my friend.
But, like a tender mother, I would take
The weary world upon my sheltering breast
And wipe away its tears and soothe its strife.
I would fulfil my promises, and make
My children bless me as they sank to rest,
Where now they curse—if I were you, O Life."

Life made no answer, and Death spoke again:
"I would not woo from God's sweet nothingness
A soul to being if I could not bless
And crown it all with joy. If unto men
My face seems awesome, tell me, Life, why then
Do they pursue me, mad for my caress,
Believing in my silence lies redress
For your loud falsehoods? (So spake Death again).
Oh, it is well for you I am not fair,
Well that I hide behind a voiceless tomb,
The mighty secrets of that other place.
Else would you stand in impotent despair
While unfledged souls, straight from the mother womb
Rushed to my arms, and spat upon your face."

The Manicure Lady
She Finds August Conducive to Flirting

"AUGUST is a swell month," said the Manicure Lady. "I have always thought that it is too bad August is named after a German."

"I never noticed anything so very swell about August," said the Head Barber. "It is mostly dog days and dust."

"Not down where I am living," said the Manicure Lady. "Down in Wollaston the mornings and evenings is great. It gets a little hot in the middle of the day, but when the men get home from their offices at night the cool breezes is coming in from the ocean, and there is always a band concert over to the yacht club, and the grass is so green out in the park that I could lie there in the shade all day if I didn't have to come in here and slaughter them hangnails."

"I'm getting sick of Summer," said the Head Barber. "I wish it would snow."

"Don't be such a crank, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Listen to this beautiful description of August, wrote by Felicia Hemans:

"'The brown woods lay latent in the August afternoon. A thrush ruffled up its feathers in an oak tree and slept, sublimely content. A caterpillar wriggled beneath a log, and a red squirrel raved in the branches overhead. Long vines of ivy twined about the sturdy trunks of England's noblest yews, and above, far above, drifted out the deep booming of a mallard's song.'

"Ain't that grand, George?"

"I Can't See That Dope."

"We'll make that about eight to one," said the Head Barber. "Of course, I never knew Felicia Hemans and I never was in England in August, but there ain't much to rave about in the lines you just pulled. I like descriptive stuff, if it is well wrote, but I can't see the dope you just handed out."

"I don't care whether you can see it or not," said the Manicure Lady. "It is the real McCoy, just the same, and August is the real month. It is the month of goldenrod, brother Wilfred says—goldenrod and broken vows.

"Wilfred says that the old Greeks used to set aside the month of August for their revels, and he says that the flirting they pulled off was sometimes outrageous. I wonder if that's why I feel so kittenish these days.

"Little Bud Fisher came in the other day to have his nails did, and the way I winked at that kid would knock your two eyes clear out of their regular places. He isn't a handsome boy, George, being too long in the nose and all that, but I warmed up to him like a black bass going after a green frog. It wasn't until he called me a flirt that I realized my position and began to hedge."

"It's funny that I haven't felt any of that August spirit," said the Head Barber. "Any number of nice looking girls pass me when I am getting out of the subway and I never bat an eye. I suppose the answer is that I am getting old."

"Nobody is ever too old to flirt in August," said the Manicure Lady. "There was a old gent in here yesterday that must have been a worldly proposition when Napoleon began pining away at Helena, Montana. And would you believe it?—that old gink gripped me something fierce by the hand and did all of the love patter stuff. I was that surprised that I forgot to put the rouge on his nails, the sassy old thing!

"Joe Blow was in yesterday, too, and he proposed to me three times while I was getting his nails did. He said that my love was the only thing which could keep him in the straight and narrow primrose path, and I told him I guessed he was right. He gave me fifty seeds for a tip.

"Yes, George, August is a great month."

Platonic Friendship--Last Stages--By Nell Brinkley

The books are thrown to the floor, and the girl and boy have flown to each other's arms and hearts, and Love tweaks old Plato's nose.

EVERYONE wonders! And heaps try it. Little girls with romance, still a white statue in the garden looming so high that they can't seem to ever tiptoe enough to see his eyes; big girls who have a husband, and peered long ago into romance's eyes and are tip-toeing, they say, now look into the changeling eyes of Platonic Friendship; little boys, who laugh at love yet and tweak his ears when they pass, utterly contemptuous; big boys, old, gray boys, with good, reliable old granite faces and a foolish, fluttering, giddy bird for the hearts in their breasts.

The little girl and the little boy have their eyes turned on a star somewhere, "and he travels the fastest who travels alone" on the up trail to a star, so they solemnly vow to be bachelors both, and they propound Plato between times while they hunt for the star of their ambitions, and they have a little bust with a band round his head and curly whiskers above their door.

The big girl and the big grey boy snap their fingers at the white romance as a thing to be known and passed and forgotten, as they have known and passed and thought they have forgotten, and they link arms and take the trail that ends in more than the white romance—that the little boy and the little girl will find—proud of themselves because they are big, Amazon-minded.

I don't know. I wouldn't tweak old Plato's nose as Love dares to do—but this is just 'bout the way the last stage looks to me.

All the books wherein their safety and the trail to the star lay, thrown helter-skelter, "divil-the-bit-and-again-will-I-open-ye," on their poor faces with their leaves and backs broken, bachelor vows to the four wild winds of Heavens, my little boy and my little girl flown to each other's arms and hearts, and the changeling they call Platonic Friendship turned swiftly into the stealing, giggling shape of Love and creep-mousing up on the bust above the door, in mockery, to pull his nose!

Look at the wise, soft-handed Ladies and the men that loved 'em down through the early and late romances—red-gold hair Launcelot and Arthur's wife, called Guinevere; Abelard and Heloise, the nun, and Paolo and Francesca da Rimini, who read and thought together—and one day laid down the book where they read of Launcelot and Guinevere and "They read no more that day!"

That's a good little line for Platonic Friendship—"And they read no more that day."

Ballade of the Boss
By KENNETT HARRIS

YOU may argue as much as you please
That the great sovereign people should reign;
I am one of the sort that agrees,
But that talk always gives me a pain.
If they had any backbone or brain,
It would not be such drivel and drool,
But I've found—and I do not complain—
The dear people are easy to fool.

Just you give them a bit of a breeze,
Let them think they are going to gain,
That you mean to let up on the squeeze
Or to stop quite a lot of the drain.
They will be, for a time, quite insane,
But you merely keep quiet and cool!
Thus your grip you can always retain,
The dear people are easy to fool.

You can bunch them and hive them like bees,
(And there's always some honey to strain).
It is seldom that one of them sees
He is fast to a rivetted chain.
They are awfully easy to train,
You can wind them like thread on a spool,
For their friends try to teach them in vain—
The dear people are easy to fool.

L'ENVOI.

Will the star of the boss ever wane?
Will there be a revolt from his rule?
I reply in the cheerful refrain,
The dear people are easy to fool.

Getting Things Mixed
And He Found Honesty the Best Policy

THE pretty girl with the babyish mouth and fluffy hair tilted her chin a trifle higher as she greeted the young man who had just entered. He had jauntily reached for her whole hand and what he got was the mere tips of her fingers.

"H'm!" he said as the tilted chin took another tilt. "My, but you're altitudinous this evening!" he added. "What's happened?"

The pretty girl languidly seated herself and brushed from her skirt a speck of dust which wasn't there. "What did you say?" she inquired, with faint interest.

The young man saw that the case was serious. "I say, Mabel," he protested, "what's wrong?"

"Nothing," said the pretty girl and stared out the window.

The young man changed his position and cleared his throat. "You act so—so queer," he said, argumentatively. "Not like yourself—your own sweet, sunny self!"

The pretty girl almost sniffed as she said "Really" and continued to stare at the radiator.

"I suppose," said the young man, desperately, "that I must have done something. Or that you think I've done something. Well, I haven't! You're dead wrong! Tell me what you mistakenly think it is I have done and I'll explain."

The pretty girl surveyed him coldly. "You can't explain," she told him in her evenest tone. "You did it, and that's all there is about it! I'm surprised to think that you would even try to explain such——"

"But I can!" interrupted the young man determinedly. "If you'll only stop long enough to tell me what! Why, I've thought of you every minute! I—— Say, didn't you get that box of chocolates I sent you yesterday?"

The pretty girl surveyed him as though he were a new and not particularly interesting specimen of insect. "I got a box of chocolates," she admitted.

"Well," said the young man, who felt he had struck the trail at last, "they weren't loaded with dynamite or arsenic, were they? Didn't the ribbon they were tied up with match the dress you had on when they came? Or maybe you didn't like the pattern of the lace paper over them? Confide in me!"

"I'd joke if I were you!" breathed the pretty girl resentfully. "Nothing is serious to you! It's just what I might have expected!"

"Mabel," said the young man, sternly, "you might as well tell me first as last what was wrong about the candy?"

"The candy was all right," said the pretty girl. "It seemed perfectly good candy. I gave it to the cook."

"You gave——" the young man stuttered.

"Yes," said the pretty girl, with rising color in her cheeks, "as it wasn't for me, and I didn't know to whom it did belong. I couldn't eat it. So I gave it to Nora."

The young man looked at her speechlessly and imploringly. From her handkerchief she fished a card which she silently extended to him and he as silently took.

"That card," said the pretty girl impersonally, "was with the candy. It's your calling card—and you'd written on it, 'Coals to Newcastle—sweets to Vera.' I suppose you send out candy boxes by the half dozen at a time instead of just to me, as you've said! You've just been deceiving me all this time! And I don't know any one n-n-amed Vera—and I don't w-w-want to and I hate her anyhow—and don't you dare try to explain! The cook got Vera's candy and it served her right!"

The young man was staring grimly at the card. "Oh—er—I see!" he murmured lamely as his brain whizzed, seeking a way out.

"I'm glad you do!" flashed the pretty girl. "So do I! I see you don't really care a bit about me—and when you said I was the only girl in the world you were fibbing—and I don't care anyhow! But you needn't try to ex"——

Now, Mabel!" insisted the harassed young man.

"Oh, you needn't," repeated the young woman. "I know all the things you'd say—that Vera was some girl you were under obligations to for a party invitation or something, and the candy didn't mean anything more than that—or that she was your cousin—or that it was a bet or something like that! I know just what you would say off an excuse. I'll never forgive you!"

"Now, Mabel," said the young man, "be sensible!"

The pretty girl stopped twisting her handkerchief. "Well," she said, vehemently, "why don't you explain, instead of just sitting there? How did that card to that Vera thing get in my box of candy? What's your excuse?"

The young man surveyed her gloomily and gave up the struggle. "The reason that card was there," he said, "was just because I made a fool mistake and mixed the cards up. That's why—if you really must know!"

The pretty girl regarded him a long instant. "Well!" she breathed. "Well! Of all the frankness! Anyhow you were honest about it. That's something. Now, tell me who Vera is and all about her. We'll talk about forgiveness later. Is she pretty?"

"Not a bit!" said the wise young man in renewed hope.

The Perfume of the Lady in Black
A Mystery Story by the Author of "The Yellow Room."

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

IT was about half past six o'clock when, in emerging from the Square Tower, we went to pay a visit to Old Bob in the Round Tower, Rouletabille, M. Darzac and I. As soon as we entered the low basement M. Darzac uttered an exclamation of surprise and indignation at seeing the destruction which had been wrought upon a wash drawing upon which he had been working ever since the evening before in the endeavor to distract his mind, and which represented the plan for a great scaling ladder for the Fort of Hercules of the kind which had existed in the Fifteenth Century, and of which Arthur Rance had shown us the pictures. This drawing had been gashed with a knife and paint had been smeared over it. He endeavored in vain to obtain some explanation from Old Bob, who was kneeling beside a box containing a skeleton, and was so wrapped up in a shoulder blade that he did not even answer us.

As Old Bob seemed to be in a churlish humor, we left him—that is, Rouletabille and myself did. M. Darzac remained gazing at his spoiled drawing, but thinking, doubtless, of altogether different things.

As we went out of the Round Tower, Rouletabille and I raised our eyes to the sky, which was rapidly becoming covered with black, great clouds. The tempest was near at hand. In the meantime, the air seemed to grow more and more stifling.

"I am going to lie down in my room," I said. "I can't stand any more of this. Perhaps it may be cooler there with all the windows open."

Rouletabille followed me into the New Castle. Suddenly, as we reached the first landing of our winding staircase, he stopped me:

"Ah," he said in a low voice, "she is there!"

"Who?"

"The Lady in Black. Can't you smell the perfume?"

And he hid himself behind a door, motioning me to continue without waiting for him. I obeyed.

Fled Like a Ghost.

What was my amazement in opening the door of my room to find myself face to face with Mathilde!

She uttered a low cry and disappeared in the shadow, gliding away like a surprised bird. I rushed to the staircase and leaned over the balustrade. She swept down the steps like a ghost. She soon gained the ground floor and I saw below me the face of Rouletabille, who, leaning over the rail of the first landing, looked at her, too.

He mounted the steps to my side.

"Oh, my God!" he cried. "What did I tell you! Poor, poor soul!"

He seemed to be in the greatest agitation.

"I asked M. Darzac for eight days!" he went on. "But this thing must be ended in twenty-four hours or I shall no longer have strength to act."

He entered my room and threw himself into a chair as if exhausted. "I am smothering!" he moaned. "I can't breathe!" He tore his collar away from his throat. "Water!" he entreated. "Water!"

I started to fetch some, but he stopped me.

"No—I want the water from the heavens! I must have it!" and he waved his hands toward the dark skies from which huge drops were slowly beginning to fall.

For ten minutes he remained stretched out in the chair, thinking. What surprised me was that he asked no question or uttered no conjecture as to what the Lady in Black had been seeking in my room. I would not have known how to answer, if he had done so. At length, he rose.

"Where are you going?" I asked.

"To take the guard at the postern."

He would not even come in to dinner and sent word to have some soup brought out to him as though he were a soldier. The dinner was served in la Louve at 8:30. Darzac, who came to the table from Old Bob's workroom, said that the latter refused to dine also. Mme. Edith, fearing that her uncle might be ill, went immediately to the Round Tower. She would not even allow her husband to accompany her—indeed, she seemed to be much out of humor with him.

The Lady in Black came in on the arm of her father. She cast on me a look of sorrowful reproach which disturbed me greatly. Her eyes seemed never to wander from me.

It was a gloomy meal enough. No one ate much. Arthur Rance looked every moment in the direction of the Lady in Black. All the windows were open. The atmosphere was suffocating. A flash of lightning and a heavy clap of thunder came in rapid succession—and then, the deluge! A sigh of relief issued from our overcharged breasts. Mme. Edith reappeared just in time to escape being drenched by the furious rain which beat down like cannon balls upon the peninsula.

Treated Like Bear.

The young woman told us in excited tones and with her hands clasped, how she had found Old Bob bending over his desk with his head buried in his hands. He had refused to have anything to say to her. She had spoken to him affectionately and he had treated her like a bear. Then, as he had obstinately held his hands to his ears, she had pricked one of his fingers with a little pin set with rubies which she used to fasten the lace scarf which she wore in the evening over her shoulders. Her uncle, she said, had turned upon her like a madman, had snatched the little pin from her and thrown it upon the desk. And then he had spoken to her—"brutally, rudely as he had never done before in his life!" she ejaculated. "Get out of here and leave me alone!" was what he had said to her. Mme. Edith had been so much pained that she went out without saying a word. She had turned her head for a last look at her old uncle and had been almost struck dumb by what she saw.

The "oldest skull in the history of the human race" was upon the desk, and Old Bob, a handkerchief stained with blood in his hand, was spitting in the skull. He had always treated it with the most severe respect and had insisted that others should do the same. Edith had hurried away, almost frightened.

Robert Darzac reassured her by telling her that what she had taken for blood was only paint and that Old Bob's skull had been spattered by the paints which had been used in the wash drawing.

I left the table to hurry out to Rouletabille and also to escape from Mathilde's glances. What had the Lady in Black been doing in my bedroom? I was not to wait long to know!

* * * * * * * *

When I started out the thunder was pealing loudly and the rain falling with redoubled force. It took me only one bound to reach the postern. No Rouletabille was there! I found him on the terrace, watching the entrance to the Square Tower and receiving the full strength of the storm at his back.

I entreated him to take shelter under the arch.

"Leave me alone!" he said impatiently. "Leave me alone. This is the deluge. Ah, how good it is! How good—all this anger of the heavens! Have you ever had a desire to roar with the thunder? I have—and I am roaring now. Listen, while I cry out—alas! alas! alas! My voice is stronger than the thunder!"

And he plunged into the darkness, making the shadows resound with his savage clamors. I believed this time that he had surely gone mad! But in my heart I knew that the unhappy lad was breathing forth in these indistinct articulations of frightful anguish the misery that burned him, and which he was constantly trying to hinder from burning up the heart and the soul in his body—the misery of being the son of Larsan.

I turned helplessly and as I did so, I felt a hand seize my wrist and a dark form cried out to me above the tempest:

"Where is he?"

POISON TURNED TO ITCHING ECZEMA

On Hands and Face—Torment Prevented Sleep—Sufferer Had to Give Up His Work—Specialists and "Cures" Utterly Failed.

IS CURED AND CALLS CUTICURA WORLD'S BEST

"Three years ago, while a conductor, I was poisoned from the brass railings on the cars. I contracted salt-rheum or eczema on my hand. In wiping the perspiration from my face, I poisoned my nose and chin and was unable to shave. I had to give up my position and was treated by specialists, but to no avail. I tried every remedy I was told of and took so much medicine that I felt like a walking drug shop. The doctors could only relieve me for a little while.

"One day I chanced to see a Cuticura advertisement and thought I would try the Cuticura Remedies, but I had no faith at the time as I had been deceived by so many so-called 'cures.' After three applications of Cuticura Ointment, the itching ceased and after using two boxes I was completely cured and shaving does not interfere with it whatsoever. My nose is as clear as ever and I am now a well man both in body and mind. I consider the Cuticura Remedies to be the best in the world and I trust some poor sufferer will see this and be benefited thereby.

"I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I can also say the suffering was intense. It itched and burned so that it was impossible to sleep but thanks to the wonderful Cuticura Remedies I am now well. I enclose my photograph which you may publish. The tennis tournament of the Sippican Club opens to-day in Marion, the most important feature of the meet being the contest for the Buzzards Bay Cup, which must be won on three successive years before it can become the property of any contestant. The cup is now held by Dwight Davis. Miss Jane Hamlin of Bay State road, Miss Martha D. Brewer of Marlboro street, David Rice, George C. Thomas, Jr., and C. W. Leonard make up the committee in charge.

Senator and Mrs. Allen T. Treadway have also issued invitations for a dinner in their honor at the Red Lion Inn on Wednesday.

The reception held yesterday afternoon in Cambridge in honor of Sir Francis and Lady Campbell of London was especially interesting from the fact that it brought together a large and notable company of men and women from Boston, Cambridge, Brookline and the Newtons, who are interested in the progress of the blind. Sir Francis was knighted by King Edward for his life work on behalf of the blind of England, and he is now head of the Royal Normal College for the Blind, which he founded in 1872. He is an American, and when Dr. Howe was head of the Perkins Institute for the Blind, was connected with the institution. The reception was held at the home of Sir Francis's son.

Residents of Lenox and the whole Summer colony thereabouts are greatly interested in the exhibition of statuary and painting, which is to be held in the Stockbridge Casino on the 15th for the benefit of the Casino. The paintings come principally from the studios of those who have spent the Summer in the Berkshires and have never before been on exhibition. Some of the exhibitors will be Miss Lydia Field, Miss Matilda Brownell, Miss Mary Kobbe, Mrs. Newman K. Perry, Frederick Crowninshield, Daniel Chester French, Edward I. Morse, Augustus Lukeman and Walter Nettleton.

Miss Mary Shreve Ames of Boston gave an elaborate dinner party at the Train villa in Newport last evening. Others entertaining dinner parties were the Hamilton McK. Twombleys, the Elisha Dyers and the Frederick W. Vanderbilts.

"SONIA, I told you to pack my traveling case with the rest of my things, and I find it left on my dressing table," she cried, holding out the case.

"I am sorry, Mademoiselle, that I overlooked it," the girl said earnestly. "I will pack it now."

"You need not bother; I will pack it myself," Germaine said. "But really, Sonia, you act as if you thought you were a guest."

The Duke's face showed real distress as he interposed to calm his fiancee and save Sonia further humiliation.

"Surely, Germaine, such a trifling lapse does not deserve so much discussion," he remonstrated.

"It is my affair, Jacques, and I wish you wouldn't interfere," Germaine said haughtily. "May not one speak to one's own servant?"

"Oh, Germaine," Charmerace cried, feeling in every fibre of himself the pain that made the delicate girl before him wince as if a whip lash had struck her.

"Take those cards to your room and finish addressing them," Germaine commanded, and as Sonia hesitated an instant she added sharply:

"Well, why do you not obey?"

With a quick intake of breath the girl replied:

"I—I will obey, mademoiselle; certainly."

Germaine flounced out of the drawing room. Sonia went over to the pile of envelopes on the floor where Bernard had thrown them, and the Duke knelt beside her, gathering them up and placing them in her hands.

"You mustn't mind her so much," he said soothingly. "She's really a good sort at heart, but she's been rich and petted and spoiled, and you won't be unhappy about it, will you?"

"I will try not, Your Grace," she said.

Love's Danger Signal.

Her left arm hung at her side. Her big, deep eyes were pleading. Her curving mouth drooped sadly. Charmerace stepped quickly over to her, caught her hand and pressed it to his lips.

The thrill of his kiss went through Sonia's sensitive body like an electric shock. Her head was thrown back, her eyes half closed, her body tense, as Charmerace dropped her hand and stepped back. She went swiftly to the doorway, where she turned upon him with the mingled happiness and despair of one who has caught a fleeting glimpse of joy and lost it in her eyes.

"Thank you," she said, and was gone.

Charmerace turned from looking after her and paced up and down, his two hands clasped beneath his chin. Compassion surged over him. It was love's danger signal, but he knew it not.

His revery was interrupted by the voices of Monsieur Gournay-Martin and Charolais, as they approached from the library, arguing over the price of the 100-horse-power automobile.

Monsieur Gournay-Martin was about fifty-five years old, rather fat, florid and apoplectic in appearance. He was irascible, given to temper, but on the whole well-intentioned, simple-minded, and with an eye singly to his collections of old masters, rare bric-a-brac, furniture and jewels, on which he had spent fortunes. His collection was in many respects the finest in France.

"I will tell you, sir, the price is 19,000 francs and not a cent less," he was almost shouting at the protesting, obsequious Charolais.

An Addition to the Party.

"But, Monsieur, that is an enormous price," the visitor protested as he filed out, followed first by his big son, Anastase, with the black moustache and goatee, next by the saffron-colored son, Bernard, who had been caught thieving, and, strangely enough, lastly by the other son, Hippolyte, who had been with him first.

The duke, lost in his revery of Sonia, did not seem to see that there had been an addition to the party whom he had not seen before. Monsieur Gournay-Martin was too much taken up with the father to pay any attention to the strange sons.

"It is a bargain, I tell you," Gournay-Martin insisted, almost angrily. "The motor cost 23,000 francs, and I am selling it to you for 19,000 francs. It is a bargain. Come, come, sir. You are a Shylock."

"We will have to see the car again," Charolais said.

"Oh, very well. Firmin," the old gentleman called to the gatekeeper. "Take these gentlemen to the garage and tell Jean to do whatever they want him to do."

In the wake of Firmin the four mysterious visitors went out in the growing darkness toward the garage. Monsieur Gournay-Martin, chuckling with satisfaction over the bargain which he believed he had made, went over to the Duke.

"How are you, Jacques?" he said, shaking hands effusively. "I am glad to see you. Did you see that fellow? I can twist the idiot around my little finger."

He sat down, laughing and chuckling immoderately.

"I have had that machine four years," he said. "I paid 23,000 francs for it and I sell it for 19,000 and it isn't worth a puff of snuff."

The Name Excites Him.

He laughed again and Charmerace regarded him with amusement. Outside the twilight was fading into the blackness of night. Storm clouds were gathering. Far in the west, where the sun had set, there was an occasional flash of lightning, and the remote rumble of thunder, distant as yet, but approaching.

Somewhere around the place those four strange visitors were engaged on a mysterious errand. But the self-satisfied, complacent old gentleman's mind was at rest. He was content with his bargain, pleased with his home, himself, and above all, with his collection.

"Ah, Jacques," he said, his hands clasped together. "It is a great thing to have taste; to know values; and I pride myself upon that. My paintings, my bric-a-brac, my furniture are the finest in Europe."

The Duke was standing beside the writing desk where Sonia had been at work, regarding his future father-in-law with smiling face.

"And the tiara of the Princess of Lombard, which Arsene Lupin coveted," he suggested.

Firmin's Strange Entrance.

"Eh, what!" the old man cried, his face growing pale at the sound of the name. "Don't mention that name to me. Oh, the scoundrel. My Murillo! My Rubens! The villain!"

Monsieur Gournay-Martin's face grew purple again at the recollection after the pallor which came at hearing the name of the terrible thief had fled. He sat down in the chair and fanned himself vigorously.

"Just think of it, Jacques," he said. "The boldness, the brazen effrontery of the whole thing. It seemed incredible, and it is hard to believe even now.

"Why, I was sitting here, in this very room," he went on. "It was about this time in the evening. Everything was peaceful and quiet. No one dreamed of anything extraordinary about to happen. We were all serene."

The old gentleman was talking rapidly, explosively, and neither he nor the Duke observed the entrance of Firmin, the gatekeeper, still unkempt and in his shirt sleeves.

"I was sitting in this exact spot," Monsieur Gournay-Martin went on, "when Firmin, the gatekeeper, came in and said——"

"Here's a letter for you, sir," Firmin interrupted, holding out an envelope.

"Eh, what?" the old gentleman cried, startled for a moment. "Oh, yes, certainly."

He took the letter and talked rapidly on as he adjusted his eyeglasses to read the address:

"Firmin came in and said, 'Here's a letter,' and he handed me an envelope. The handwriting——"

Monsieur Gournay-Martin stopped suddenly and stared at the envelope which he held in his hand and at which he had taken his first look through his glasses. For a moment it seemed that his eyes must pop out of his head, so startled was their expression. Then he almost shrieked:

"The handwriting! My God! The handwriting!" and sank limp in his seat, clutching at his collar. It was the handwriting of Arsene Lupin.

Chapter IV.

MONSIEUR GOURNAY-MARTIN was stricken with absolute terror. The Duke of Charmerace grew apprehensive for his future father-in-law, whose face had grown purple with excitement. He did not at once comprehend the cause of the old gentleman's fear, and regarded the strange exhibition with amazement.

"What is it?" he asked. "Whose handwriting? Why are you so alarmed?"

Struggling for breath and articulation, Gournay-Martin waved the fateful letter in his trembling hands.

"It is his handwriting," he gasped. "This letter is from Arsene Lupin."

"Nonsense! Open it!" cried the Duke.

With hands that he could scarcely control, Monsieur Gournay-Martin tore the edge from the envelope and drew from it a sheet of double foolscap. He groaned aloud as he recognized the paper and looked at the Duke as if appealing to him for succor.

"Well, read it," Charmerace urged.

Controlling himself with a mighty effort, Monsieur Gournay-Martin unfolded the paper and read aloud:

"'Sir—In my collection of paintings, the foundation of which I laid from your galleries three years ago, there are few old masters. I have only a Velasquez, a Rembrant and two small Rubens. You, sir, have many fine specimens in your house in Paris and it is a pity that these should remain in your possession.'"

The old gentleman interrupted his reading with another groan and looked despairingly at the Duke.

Lupin's Demands.

"What is the rest of it?" Charmerace insisted.

"'Also, sir, you have detained for three years, against my will, the tiara of the late Princess of Lombard,' he continued reading. 'I shall call for the paintings, the tiara and your drawing room suite of the period of Louis XVI. to-morrow morning. Devotedly yours, ARSENE LUPIN.'"

Monsieur Gournay-Martin dropped the letter and sank back in his chair, tearing at his necktie and collar. Apoplexy seemed imminent.

"Water, water," he gasped.

Charmerace, really alarmed now for the old gentleman's safety, rang and shouted for the servants. Firmin, who was just outside the door, fetched a glass of water. Germaine and Sonia rushed in.

Everyone was in a panic save the Duke, who, after satisfying himself that Monsieur Gournay-Martin was in no immediate danger, picked up the letter and studied it carefully.

Solution of Hudson-Fulton Puzzle

THE Schoolmaster's Hudson-Fulton problem, wherein it was required to arrange the figures 1-2-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-0 in a sum to produce the total—1609—has been mastered by only the brightest members of the Puzzle Class, for it proved to be a knotty proposition and required considerable patience and ingenuity in the working out.

By employing fractions the ten figures can be grouped to produce the desired total, as follows:

1608 plus the fraction 2-7 plus 35-49 equals 1609.

The one hundred prize puzzle books for best answers are awarded to the following solvers:

Advice to the Lovelorn

A FAITHLESS SWEETHEART

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty years old and have had a good education. I have been going with a young girl for three years. She is two years my junior. I am deeply in love with her.

I have been out of the city for the past nine months. Upon my arrival last week I heard that she was keeping company with another young man and scheduled to be engaged next month.

Kindly advise me how to win back her love. S. H.

THERE is nothing to do but enter the lists and try to win her love again. She is a fickle young woman, and I think you are just as well off without her; but if you care for her very much you might as well try to regain her affection. As long as you were not engaged you have no real claim on her, you know.

KEEP HER FRIENDSHIP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-five years of age and have known a young lady and taken her to places of amusement for the past two years. A few weeks ago I proposed to her, but was turned down. I would like to have your advice as to whether I should keep her friendship, as I love her very dearly and would like to win her. J. J. B.

KEEP her friendship, by all means, and in time she may learn to care for you, when she sees that your love is sincere. Don't bother her with repeated proposals, but be content for a while with friendship only.

DO NOT ASK AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been in love with a certain young man for a long time, but he is rather indifferent to me. I have asked him to call on me several times, but he never asks to come again. I want to know whether I am doing a foolish thing in asking him to call on me. I am young and want to know what to do. M. W.

I WOULD not ask him again if I were you. You have given him a cordial invitation and he knows that he will be welcome. That is quite enough, and he will call if he wants to.

Narragansett And Newport In Social War

NEWPORT, Sept. 3.—A social war is on between the Summer colonies of Narragansett Pier and Newport because of the attempt on the part of the Pier contingency to rob Newport of its tennis tournament, which has been one of the leading social features for years.

Not content with this the Pierites have practically killed Newport as a polo centre and there are those in Narragansett Pier, headed by John H. Hanan, who are ready to wager that the Pier will have the international polo matches next Summer and the cream of all the polo for all time afterwards.

While the Pier people are working to accomplish their mission the polo players are backing them up, because there is a fine polo field, ample hotel accommodations, plenty of sport and congenial people on all sides at Narragansett.

Newport in its struggle for polo leadership has its strongest supporters in Alfred and Reginald Vanderbilt and Livingston Beekman.

Members of the Newport cottage settlement are angry with the Pier folks and there may be a boycott on Narragansett next Summer from Newport if tennis and polo is removed from here.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

COPPERS LEAD LOCAL MARKET

STATE STREET, Sept. 3.—Interest centred entirely in the so-called Calumet & Hecla Copper stocks this forenoon and to the detriment in a measure of the balance of the local list. Allouez had a 5⅛ point advance to 55⅛, subsequently reacting to 53. Centennial also rose 2 points to 43½, reacting to 42½. As might be expected such sharp advances would bring profit-taking and consequent reaction, but offerings were well taken and the market held well.

The announcement of the suspension of Freeman, Rollins & Company came somewhat as a surprise, but as the firm did not have a Boston Stock Exchange membership it had no effect. La Salle touched 16 and Isle Royale stiffened to 29¾. Both are in the Calumet category. Lake Copper was freely offered and ran off 1½ points to 34¾. Some exchanging of this stock for others was reported. Superior Copper rose a point to 71½.

Amalgamated was quiet but firm at 84¼ to 84½, and Steel common sold within ⅛ of its record price by going up to 79⅝. This doesn't look like the panic in Steel stock which Mr. Lawson promised earlier in the week.

Curb trading was light, but generally firm. There were no features and little interest was taken in the course of prices.

STEEL AT 79¾, NEW RECORD

By T. C. SHORTELL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—A buoyant and strong market characterized the opening of the Stock Exchange to-day. Advances were general from ⅛ to 1¾ points. U. S. Steel common attracted the greatest attention within the first half hour, rising to a new high record in response to brisk demand. It rose ½ point, crossing 79. The strength and activity held well for the first hour.

Union Pacific came in for a great share of both features and rose 1 point, while the preferred advanced 1¾ points. Fractional advances were general along the list and included Southern Pacific, Reading, Atchison, Consolidated Gas and Smelters. The American railroad stocks were firm in London with particular strength in Missouri, Kansas & Texas and Mexican Railway.

The strength of the market was well shown when the suspension was announced of Freeman, Rollins & Co. There was some hesitation, but the bullish tone continued and soon afterward prices resumed their upward trend.

Steel common by noon had climbed up another quarter point to a new high record of 79¾. The Frisco issues were bought aggressively, and United States Rubber gained one point. The only weak feature of the market was the Interborough-Metropolitan issues. The preferred dropped one point, and Third Avenue sustained a moderate loss.

Seventh Day Wonder of New England

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, Sept. 3.—Ordinarily such an estimate as that submitted by the Government on cotton would have had some effect on the stock market, specifically on the roads which carry the staple, but times on 'Change are not quite normal. There prevails that perverse torpor which customarily ensues upon a period of great excitement; a condition at once conjectural and uncontrollable. It is then unusually difficult to tell what is coming next.

Gould stocks are in good demand. The report of the Missouri Pacific and constituent companies made to the Stock Exchange for the year ended June 30 show an increase in gross revenues amounting to $2,196,697 over the previous year. Operating expenses were increased $2,427,311, leaving a decrease in net operating revenue of $230,614. The road will have a much better report for the coming year.

Strength of Union Pacific preferred keeps interest alive in the prospect of that stock sharing in a distribution of assets by the Union Pacific Company. The public and even some of the directors of the company do not seem to accept as final Mr. Harriman's statement that segregation is not in his mind. It is true, the strength of the stock is probably due almost entirely to the fact that there is no market for it, and it might as well be kept at 105 as at 95; but its right to share in segregation is seriously discussed. Many persons believe that because the preferred stock has had the right to subscribe for bonds it is therefore entitled to share in segregation. The right to subscribe for bonds is not a division of profit. The same right might be given legally to any banker or syndicate, and, in fact, is frequently so given, especially by the Pennsylvania and New York Central. Any profit made in such a subscription is simply a premium paid for the raising of capital and is not in any sense a division of surplus.

It is argued that bonds were issued to pay for investments to be divided, and that as those bonds were a prior lien to the preferred stock, this fact entitles the preferred to a share. This does not follow, since those very bonds were converted into common stock. Every dollar of the assets in dispute was paid for by common stock or by bonds convertible into common stock, and the equity of the preferred stock was never in the slightest degree jeopardized by the purchases.

The Louisville & Nashville has started in on its new fiscal year with another increase in its gross, and net earnings in line with the uninterrupted gains of recent months. The increases are not as large as those for May, but are better than those for June.

Central Leather has responded to the good annual report made by the American Hide & Leather Company, the bulls arguing that conditions which were favorable to the manufacturers of upper leather were also favorable to the tanners of sole leather. The possibility that the minority interests might accept the proposition held out to them and would open the way to the merger into Central Leather of the United States Leather Company, was also a factor of some importance.

The yearly statement of American Locomotive Company was a shock to those who are not initiated. A decrease of $3,644,118 in net earnings is an extraordinary drop for an industrial organization, but—but here is the importance of the matter—not for the industry. At all times locomotives are the last things purchased by a railway. In normal seasons the acquisition of engines is somewhat of a luxury. In a panicky period some are sold if a purchaser can be found. Naturally the output of the American Locomotive Company in the last fiscal year was the lowest of any in the history of the company.

What elicits questioning comment, however, among informed financiers is the fact that the company continued to pay dividends on the common stock when the business was running into a heavy deficit. Manifestly, there has been a break in the conservative policy outlined by former President Calloway, who has insisted on deferring first payments on the ordinary shares for three years in order to build up a safe surplus.

The Daily Iron Review prophesies that the business of the Steel Corporation for the coming year will amount to close to $1,000,000,000, or an increase of 32 per cent. over the best year in its history. This, according to the annual reports, was in 1907, when the business of the company reached the immense total if $757,015,000, compared with $482,308,000 in 1908.

The United States produced in the month of August close to 2,200,000 tons of iron, which is at the rate of 26,400,000 tons a year. Including charcoal iron, the production last month must have been at the rate of approximately 27,000,000 tons a year.

That the iron industry has practically recovered all of its lost ground is evident from the fact that the rate of production last month compared with actual production of 25,718,361 tons in 1907, the banner year in iron.

Before the close of the year the United States will probably be producing more iron than at any time in its history. The heaviest monthly production in the history of the iron industry was in May, 1907, when 2,295,205 tons of anthracite and coke pig iron were produced.

The price of steel bars will probably be advanced from $1.40 per 100 pounds to $1.45 per 100 pounds within the next few days. As one manufacturer put it, the advance will be forced by the congested condition of the mills.

Specifications against steel bar contracts are heavier than they have been in years, and certain manufacturers are unable to take business calling for delivery within the next sixty and ninety days. After the declaration of the open market in February of this year, steel bars sold as low as $1 per 100 pounds. The recovery since then has been equal to $8 a ton.

TEN DAYS MORE TO SEE "CINDERELLA."

Including to-day, there are just ten more days in which to see Wonderland's shows, and especially the great production of Cinderella. The fame of the Cinderella show has extended all over New England, bringing one excursion after another and often several in a single day.

Next Sunday's Boston American will contain the last of the Wonderland free tickets for use this year, fourteen coupons, two for absolutely free admission to the Park and the Vaudeville and the other twelve half-fare tickets to Wonderland's leading rides and shows. These tickets will be good on Tuesday or Wednesday.

On Labor Day the Park will be open from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M. Combination tickets giving admission and ten park shows are sold every day outside and inside the park. Order the Sunday American in advance and clip the free tickets and take your family on one more pilgrimage to the great North Shore resort before the season closes.

Do you want to become interested in a rich copper property under especially favorable circumstances? If so send your name and address and I will put the proposition before you in detail. This is a Boston enterprise and will be handled by reputable Boston people. B 457, Boston American.

SHAW DROPS POLITICS; WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Senator James F. Shaw of Manchester announced to-day that he is not a candidate for re-election. The announcement caused surprise, not only in Essex County, but throughout the State.

"Business Interests" is given by Senator Shaw as the reason for his non-candidacy. He calls it "non-candidacy" and not "withdrawal," asserting that he has never declared himself a candidate for a fourth term.

Almost coincident with the Manchester man's announcement came a cross-libel for divorce filed by his wife Nettie, daughter of H. Fisher Eldredge, the Portsmouth millionaire, in the Essex County courts. Mrs. Shaw asks for the custody of the couple's one child, a boy, who is now with the father.

Some pointed out the appearance of the Lodge-Gardner forces in the camp of ex-Mayor Tolman of Gloucester, an avowed candidate for the Senate seat held by Shaw for the last three years. Shaw himself had this to say:

"I've had three years in the Senate. I must retire some time. Now looks good to me. I have an indorsement from organized labor. I am on record in favor of direct nominations and the income tax amendment. I have an indorsement from the farmers throughout the State for my advocacy of their milk bill. Why not retire now, when everyone is with me? A man can't stay in the Senate forever and retain friendships. Higher office? Maybe, some time."

'KEEGAN'S PAL' SHOWS 'HONOR OF THIEVES'

In "Keegan's Pal," which is beginning the new season at the Park Theatre, Bostonians are invited to see a working out of the old adage, "honor among thieves." Aside from its general dramatic interest, this melodrama has a particular concern for the legal fraternity, as its principal character is a former convict who has reformed, risen to be a great attorney and who is suddenly confronted with his unlawful past.

While the theme is not new the play contains original turns of thought and highly dramatic situations. Paul Wilstach, the author, hitherto associated more with the managerial end of dramatic enterprises, was called upon by the audience to speak.

The role of "Keegan's Pal," the lawyer and reformed criminal, is taken by Emmett Corrigan. He plays the part with earnestness. When he finds that his former pal is suspected of another crime he decides to shield him, especially as exposure would bring disgrace on the lawyer and his son and daughter.

Harry Harwood as Keegan, the suspected ex-convict, is excellent. He plays with the same admirable force that marked his portrayal of the role of Alderman Phelan in "The Man of the Hour."

Miss Bessie Brown Howard as Miss Deming, deserves mention for the address she displayed in her role. Ethel Clayton was an affectionate and lovable daughter to Raeburn, the lawyer.

SALES CONTINUE BRISK IN THE REALTY MARKET

Although not quite up to the big volume of yesterday, sales reported in the realty market to-day were considerable and the activity just now is very brisk.

In the South End, Edmund D. Codman, executor of the estate of George F. Parkman, and the city of Boston have sold to Samuel Goldsmith the three and one-half-story and basement swell-front brick house and 1,656 square feet of land at No. 85 Waltham street, near Tremont street. The property is assessed for a total of $8,700, of which $3,700 is on the land. J. Murray Howe, No. 28 State street, was the broker.

Willard G. Nash has transferred to Alfred S. Hayes as trustee the properties at No. 50 East Dedham street, Nos. 5, 7 and 12 Norwich street, South End; No. 8 Longfellow street, No. 20 Spring Garden street and No. 73 Allen street, Dorchester, and the estate at the corner of Cambridge and Sorrento streets, Brighton. Title to some of these parcels passed through Adoniram J. Bird. All the properties are taxed on a valuation of about $35,000.

In Roxbury the Kilby Investment Company has taken title to the three and one-half-story frame building and 3,402 square feet at Nos. 1,083-1,089 Columbus avenue, from Lilia L. Hersey. The estate is assessed on a total valuation of $16,000, of which $8,500 is on the land.

In the same district the three-story brown-stone front brick house and 1,600 square feet of land, assessed for $3,800, at No. 10 Worthington street, near Tremont street, have been sold by Ann McKeon to Emil X. Kunin. The land is rated for $1,200.

Sales in Dorchtster.

Edith P. Foster has sold to Alexander Mason a frame dwelling house and 5,080 square feet of land, [illegible] street, near Waldeck street, Dorchester. The land is taxed for $1,500.

Another property sold in the same district is that at No. 18 [illegible] street, corner of East Cottage, comprising a frame dwelling and 3,100 square feet of land, which have been conveyed by Pauline R. Raiser et al to James J. Higgins. The estate is assessed on a total valuation of $4,400, of which $1,400 is on the land.

Emil E. Perkins has sold to [illegible] J. Franz the frame house and 5,400 square feet of land at Nos. 28-30 Newcastle road, near Faneuil street, Brighton. The property is taxed on a total valuation of $5,200, of which $700 is on the land.

E. B. Sawyer et ux have sold to Eugene V. Earle the frame house and 8,236 square feet of land, assessed for a total of $3,700, at No. 9 Arden street, near Hooker street, Brighton. The land is taxed for $[illegible].

Quincy Land Deal.

Agreements have been signed for the sale of a tract of land containing about ten acres in Quincy by Arthur O. and Joseph S. Roberts to Charles M. Conant. This land, being surrounded by streets and being level and well located, is in good condition for immediate development. The party taking title, Charles M. Conant, of the Old South Building, this city, intends to immediately cut it up in house lots, and put it on the market. The brokers are Watson G. Cutter & Sons.

UNIDENTIFIED BODY FOUND MARKED 'G. F.'

The body of an unidentified man was found on the rear of the trucks of a freight car on the tracks of the Union Freight railroad on Atlantic avenue, near Richmond street, by George G. Harvey, engineer of the train. It had evidently been dragged some distance. According to the police description the man was about forty-five years old and weighed 165 pounds. The only mark of identification were the initials "G. F." on his right arm.

Will Mr. Taft Put Tweed's Lawyer on the Supreme Bench?

Many Big Men Say That He Will, We Hope and Believe That He Will Not

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Associate Justice McKenna, of the United States Supreme Court, is about to retire on account of ill health. It is believed and asserted by some men, important because of their financial power in this country, that Elihu Root is to be appointed to the Supreme Bench by Mr. Taft.

The appointment of Mr. Root is desired, and, in fact, demanded, by the type of men that have been hiring him to do their legal work.

The first of this type of men was the late William Tweed, the New York criminal. Mr. Root was HIS lawyer. Mr. Root is a cunning man; it would be insulting to his intelligence and to his cunning to doubt that he knew Tweed to be a thief. He did his best as Mr. Tweed's representative. He got a great deal of Mr. Tweed's stolen money, and some of Mr. Tweed's real estate, also stolen, or the result of stolen cash.

Some of those that have hired Mr. Root since he made his start as a Tweed lawyer have been better than Tweed, and some have been a great deal worse.

Mr. Root is the lawyer of whom the late William C. Whitney said: "Any lawyer can tell me what I can't do, but ROOT CAN TELL ME WHAT I CAN DO."

Mr. Whitney meant that, whereas the ordinary lawyer would say to him, "This is illegal, you can't do it," Mr. Root, now mentioned for the Supreme Bench, would say, "What you want to do is illegal, but YOU CAN DO IT, FOR I'LL SHOW YOU HOW YOU CAN DO IT AND DODGE THE LAW."

Is Mr. Taft going to put that gentleman on the Supreme Bench? If he does he will do a personal favor to the biggest and most corrupt men in this country; he will insult all that is good in the traditions of the Supreme Bench, and all of the citizens that look upon that Bench with respect.

A large banquet was given in New York not very long ago, just before Mr. Taft was elected, as a farewell to Lord Northcliffe. Some very important men were there—important in finance. There were Mr. J. P. Morgan, and Mr. Thomas F. Ryan, and Mr. Harriman, and H. H. Rogers, and many others of the strongest corporation owners and managers.

One of the best known of these men—Mr. Taft may have his name and verify the statement, if he wishes to—said to this writer, who expressed surprise that Root had been put into the Senate instead of being put on the Supreme Bench, where the corporations wanted him:

"Root IS going on the Supreme Bench. He has gone into the Senate only temporarily. There will be no resignations from the Supreme Court Bench until Roosevelt is out of office. He couldn't be trusted, there's no telling whom he might appoint.

"When the first resignation comes after Taft becomes President, Root will be put on the Supreme Bench."

If Mr. Taft wants to know who predicted so confidently just exactly what he would do about a Supreme Court appointment, we should be glad to give him the information, AND TO CONVINCE HIM THAT THIS STATEMENT IS ACCURATE.

If he doesn't want to know, we assume that it will be because he has no intention of making an appointment which will bitterly disappoint those that believe in him.

Making Public Interests the Fashion

What Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's motives were in opening her "Marble House" at Newport for popular suffragette meetings nobody but her spiritual adviser has a right to inquire.

Whether the lady aims at public service or only at publicity, the fact remains that her new departure will help to break down the barrier that separates society in the large sense of the word from society in the small sense.

And this is a work that very much needs to be done.

The society that identifies itself in the popular imagination with marmosets and monkey dinners needs to escape from the atmosphere of self-absorption in which it has attempted to live. It has a chance of reviving its health by a plunge into the depths of the larger social existence.

The part played by Mrs. Belmont's daughter, the Duchess of Marlborough, in instigating this motion of "the four hundred" toward the storm centre of political life is interesting and suggestive.

It may, of course, be a merely exceptional fact that an American girl must needs marry a duke in order to learn that public spiritedness is "good form."

Yet all dukes and duchesses from the beginning have been held to a stricter social accountability than American millionaires.

As for the part that women are destined to play in American politics, there can be no question that power goes with the investment of emotional interest.

American women are sure to acquire new political power, because they are evincing an unprecedented interest in public affairs.

The dull and hackneyed argument that the purity of womanhood would suffer from the contamination of politics was dismissed with fine scorn by Mr. Charles Zueblin, the principal speaker at the Newport meeting on Saturday.

He said that such an argument was treasonable to the state, since it abandoned the hope of public decency and committed to endless corruption the grand interests of "the common life."

In Mr. Zueblin's opinion, the thing to do with "dirty politics" is to send it to the wash.

And it would seem from this Newport exhibit that there are brave women in the country—even women of wealth and fashion—who are getting their sleeves rolled up.

CONVENIENCE STATIONS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is hoped that some of the wealthy Bostonians on their return from their vacations in Europe this Summer will start an agitation in Boston for more municipal convenience stations for men and women in this city. In London they can be found in every open square—Trafalgar square, Holborn Circus, Leicester square, Charing Cross, Ludgate Circus, etc. A fee of a penny (two cents) for their use pays for their maintenance. The stations on the Common have shown the need for these stations. Let the city build others in Adams, Haymarket, Dewey, Scollay squares and gradually in the outlying sections of the city.

C. J. WINTHROP.

Peary Also Ran

By MORTON BIRGE

OF all exasperating things to say about a man,
It must be: "Cook first found the Pole and Peary also ran."
Imagine coming to the Pole and having then to look Upon a placard reading thus: "I saw it first, F. Cook."

Or, maybe Peary, on his way, with frozen nose and toes,
Has come upon Cook's footprints in the chilly Arctic snows.
If ever man, on this sad earth, had amplified excuse
For saying it, then Peary had for yelling, "What's the use?"

There comes occasion, now and then, when every person thinks
He is the special victim of a double-barrelled jinx,
But all the hoodoo luck piled up since sorrow first began
Is picking winners when compared with "Peary also ran."

On Getting Home Again

By WEX JONES

INSTRUCTIONS having been given by a writer to persons about to leave their homes on a vacation, it seems proper at this time to give some hints to those returning from a Summer holiday at the seaside or in the mountains.

On reaching home do not kick aside the starveling cat which is hanging around the house. It is the sleek, rotund pet that you locked out when leaving for the Summer. Few persons realize it, but cats seldom thrive without food and a place to sleep, to say nothing of being sheltered from dogs and small boys with stones.

Be careful also to throw out the canary. Poor Dickie, his seed and water lasted only a day. However, you can easily buy another one for the Winter months.

If you have let your house during your absence and you find the tenants gone when you get back, it is a sign that you are out the rent money. If the tenants are still there when you get back, it is a sign that you will have a hard job to get them out of the place and—let your family in.

On returning after an absence of two or three months and finding that you left a gas jet burning when you went away the safest thing to do is to pretend that you strayed into the house by accident and that you do not own it or any house near it. It may be hard to give up a home like this, but you will save a lot of money by the renunciation.

If you find the morning papers for two months past piled on your front stoop, it is a sure indication that you forgot to send in your change of address.

It is advisable to keep a strict watch on callers. Some whippersnapper who may have been nice to you at the seaside may venture to call on the strength of it, and you cannot snub him too quickly if he succeeds in getting it. A good rule is to be at home to nobody for six weeks after returning to the city. This rule will also enable you to miss the ice man, who left a large piece before your basement door all through the hot months you were away.

In the event that you had carefully turned off all the gas jets, stoves, etc., in the house before leaving it, do not expect to find the meter has been stationary during your absence. It will undoubtedly have rung up a few thousand feet just to keep in practise.

If all your silver has disappeared while you were away, install a new burglar alarm system for next Summer.

Emery powder is an excellent thing to remove the tan that has been laboriously accumulated through the Summer months. Another good plan is to make incisions around the neck and ankles and peel off the skin.

If you get home and find things exactly as you left them—but you won't.
